Monroney Runs Thomas Close Race In Oklahoma

Early Primary Count Puts Senator Slightly Behind; Murray Has Gubernatorial Edge

Oklahoma City, July 4 (AP).—Representative Mike Monroney led Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) as returns in the Oklahoma primary election began coming in tonight.

With 1131 of the 3786 precincts counted, Thomas Monroney had 47,450 to Thomas' 46,656 in the race for the Democraitc senatorial nomination.

Thomas, chairman of the Agriculture Committee, is seeking his fifth consecutive term. Monroney has served in the House six terms.

Muddy roads throughout the State bogged down delivery of rural precinct returns to county election boards. Most of the State had scattered to heavy rains today.

Four-Way Contest

Johnston Murray spurted to a wide lead over three opponents in the Democratic primary for governor. He is seeking the office held by his father, former Gov. William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, 20 years ago.

The first 72 precincts gave Murray 3304 votes; William O. Coe, Oklahoma City attorney, 1766; Frank P. Douglass, former labor commissioner, 880; and former congressman Phil Ferguson 262.

The Rev. Bill Alexander held a wide lead over the combined totals of three opponents for the Republican United States nomination. His opponents are Raymond H. Fields, Guthrie newspaperman; the Rev. George T. Balch, Muskogee; and Forest Van Pelt, Oklahoma City.

Two Congressmen seeking reelection took early leads. They are Victor Wickersham, seventh district, and Toby Morris, sixth.

In the hotly-contested fifth district now held by Monroney, State Senator John Jarman led his major opponent, William A. Berry, former United States dis-

Rookie Policeman Is Shot in Pants Cleaning His Gun

When Pvt. Edward J. Van Sciver, 22, police rookie, phoned the Fourth Precinct yesterday morning to say he couldn't report for work, he was not accused of sitting down on the job.

Van Sciver unintentionally shot off his fireworks the night before Independence Day.

He was sitting on his bed at 3218 Chestnut st. ne. cleaning his service revolver when it was accidentally fired. He hasn't been sitting since.

The bullet zipped through the shiniest part of his trousers. He was treated by the family physician and his condition, generally, was reported good.

One-Armed Veteran Dies Hero in Fire

Two men died yesterday in a fire which swept the interior of a small frame dwelling at 3914 K st. nw., between the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal and the Potomac River.

Killed in the blaze were Stephen J. Wood, 51, of 305 E st. nw., pronounced dead at the scene, and George Pickett, 52, of the K st. address, who died at 6 a. m. at Emergency Hospital.

Wood, who lost his right arm serving with the Navy in World War I, was credited by police with heroism in the fire, according to Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg.

At least twice, it was reported, Wood, who was visiting there, dashed into the house in rescue attempts. In a third effort, he fell as he sought to climb through a window from a burning room.

He was found on the ground outside the house severely burned. He was pronounced dead at 3:05 a. m. by Dr. James Mandes, of Gallinger.

Injured, apparently slightly, were Mrs. Maisey Shrout, 43, of 3910 K st. nw., and Henry Swartz, 50, of 612 N. Tazewell st., Arling-

6 Masked Men Steal Evidence Against Grau

Papers Are Taken From Judge's Chambers In Cuban Scandal

Havana, Cuba, July 4 (AP).—Six masked gunmen invaded a courtroom at 4 a. m. today and made off with the documents used in investigating charges that former President Ramon Grau San Martin and other officials misappropriated 174 million dollars.

Two guards were held for questioning.

Special Judge Federico Justiniani, who has been investigating the case, said the theft "will delay but not halt the proceedings."

Court Clerk Ignacio Tamayo said "they stole every scrap of paper connected with the case. This consisted of 35 folders, each containing 200 pages. It will be a tremendous job to reconstruct the evidence."

"The robbers even stole an envelope I had hidden in a secret compartment of a filing cabinet," Judge Justiniani said.

Among the missing papers are those on which was based the recent indictment of Isauro Valdes Moreno, Grau's former secretary of the treasury, and four other treasury officials who were charged with misappropriating $9,500,000.

Prosecutors announced last week they also were going to ask for the indictment of the former president and additional officials.

Grau had demanded a complete airing of the case to clear his name.

Grau turned over his office to his friend, President Carlos Prio Socarras, in October, 1948, after a four-year term. Soon afterward, the men broke off their friendship when Prio charged that he had found government departments without funds and heavily in debt.

French Oust New Cabinet On Its 2d Day

Socialists and Reds Defeat Queuille in Anger at His Choice Of Rightist Members

Paris, July 4 (U.P.).—The two-day-old government of Premier Henri Queuille collapsed today in a crushing defeat at the hands of the National Assembly.

Queuille immediately handed his Cabinet's resignation to President Vincent Auriol, plunging France right back into its political crisis that appeared to have ended Sunday night with the formation of a new right-wing government.

The assembly vote was 334 to 221. The tide against Queuille was swung by the Socialists, irate over the fact he included former Premier Paul Reynaud and several other prominent rightists in the cabinet.

Communist members of the Chamber hooted with laughter as Queuille and his crestfallen ministers arose and walked out after the vote result was announced. All 183 Communists voted against Queuille.

Other votes against the new government were cast by the 25 supporters of Gen. Charles de Gaulle and a few extreme rightists.

Since Queuille had been regarded generally as a sort of last hope to settle France's political crisis, there appeared to be no immediate solution to the situation, made more urgent by the Korean war.

Queuille told the Chamber before the vote was taken that a defeat would not constitutionally hasten dissolution of the Assembly and new general elections. He said that dissolution would be "extremely damaging" to France and that he would fight against holding an election at this time.

The vote against the government was on three Communist and extreme-leftist questions on its makeup.

A negative Socialist vote represented a reversal of that party's stand over the weekend. The Socialists supported Queuille in

2 Women Burned By Firecracker Tossed From Car

Two women tourists got a bang-up Fourth of July reception yesterday when a firecracker tossed from an automobile landed at their feet on the Monument grounds.

Treated at Emergency Hospital for painful but not serious burns on their legs were Mrs. Mary White, 19, housewife, of Canfield, Ohio, and Miss Beatrice Copeland, 30, nurse, of Timmonsville, S. C.

They said they were sitting on a bench waiting to go up the Monument when they heard an explosion. Observers told police the firecracker was tossed from a green automobile bearing Virginia tags, carrying two sailors and two civilians.

Mystery Shot Kills Baseball Fan Among 40,000 at Polo Grounds

New York, July 4 (AP).—A mystery bullet killed a middle-aged man today at the polo grounds as 40,000 baseball fans swarmed in for the first game of a Giants-Dodgers double-header.

Few in the big, noisy holiday crowd were aware of the tragedy. Police said the death bullet may have traveled half a mile before it suddenly found a victim among the great throng.

The two ball teams were warming up on the diamond. Suddenly, Bernard Lawrence Doyle, 54, slumped in his seat high in the second deck of the grandstand in deep left field.

His companion, 12-year-old Otto Flaig, thought he'd had a heart attack. The boy — a neighbor of Doyles in Fairview, N. J., — was the man's guest at the game. But police found a bullet hole near Doyle's left ear. Medical Examiner Thomas A. Gonzales said the bullet entered above the left temple.

Assistant Chief Inspector Conrad H. Rothengast—in charge of 40 detectives on the case—said the bullet apparently traveled half a mile from some place outside the Polo Grounds. The ball park nestles beneath a bluff at 157th and 8th ave. in upper Manhattan. Tall apartments tower above it. It was from these buildings or nearby bridges that police surmised the bullet might have come.

Doyle was a Railway Express Co. employe working on the Jersey docks. He was married and had a son and daughter—both grown.

His brother, William, 52, of West New York, N. J., told police

Korean Invasion Termed 'Murder' By State Dept. Consultant Here

(Text on Page 8.)

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

John Foster Dulles last night branded the Communist invasion of Korea an attempt at "international murder" and warned Americans they may have to tighten their belts economically to meet the Soviet world challenge.

The Republican consultant to the State Department spoke before an intent crowd of 175,000 at the Sesquicentennial Fourth of July Celebration on the Washington Monument Grounds.

Twenty minutes after Dulles finished speaking, a sudden 10-minute shower swept down on the huge crowd and cut in half the evening's scheduled entertainment—but not the fireworks.

To defend the liberty we won in 1776, Dulles said, "we shall all of us have to pay a price."

Ultimate Price

In Korea, "our youth are beginning to pay the final price of life itself," he declared. "The rest of us may have to cut down on our economic indulgence so that . . . we can help our friends to match the offensive power which the Soviet Union, out of its economic poverty, supplies its friends."

Dulles, himself in Korea only two weeks ago, said the Communist attack there was "in miniature, the kind of attack that could hit us if we are content to live in a world where such methods are tolerated."

Crowd Spread Out

The crowd that heard Dulles and watched the abbreviated hour's entertainment was banked from the red and blue draped stage off Constitution ave. right up to the monument, and from 14th to 17th sts.

Park Police Inspector Mark Raspberry gave the monument crowd estimate. He said the total of spectators in the immediate vicinity reached about 250,000.

Park police had 140 men on hand to direct some of the rain-soaked spectators from the grounds and handle traffic. Hundreds of Army MP's and Metropolitan police helped.

But most watchers raised news-

There is a strong reluctance on the part of top American officials to go into even a partial mobilization, as things stand now.

That means that the Department of Defense has no present intention of invoking the draft, calling up the National Guard, ordering in reservists without their consent, or sharply increasing the number of Army divisions, Air Force groups or major Navy warship units to meet the Korean situation.

Trigger-Happy Koreans Make Front Safer Than Behind Lines

With American Forces on the Korean Front, July 4 (U.P.).—Many events of the first 10 days of the Korean war won't be found in any rule book on how to fight a war, American military experts said today.

It has become safer to fight up front than to travel behind the lines, because of jittery, trigger-happy South Koreans.

The defenders have fled in terror upon seeing Soviet-built tanks, yet have taken many a pot shot at United States bombers in the sky. They blew up a bridge without warning when both Americans and South Koreans were on it. They laugh uproariously when a gun is discharged accidentally.

Some South Korean guards have a habit of shooting first and challenging afterward, and several soldier hitch-hikers have fired on jeep drivers who would not give them rides.

This is a civil war fought by Koreans recently liberated from long rule by the Japanese. They were freed as the result of the Allied victory in World War II. Now they are fighting one another with arms provided by the United States and Russia, who are glaring at each other across the thirty-eighth parallel.

Exhausted United States military advisers, able to rest with the temporary stabilization of the front, appraised events so far as a war of nerves. There have been retreats, evacuations, patrols, no sleep and a lack of information.

In a country noted for poor roads, narrow valleys and impassable paddies, tanks should be the last modern weapon to be used here—according to the book. Yet tanks are what won North Koreans their first "battle." The GIs won the first South Korean "battle" today.

More than 150,000 troops on both sides are engaged on an irregular east-west front of about 200 miles—the width of Korea. The Japan Sea is on the east and the Yellow Sea on the west. The deepest penetration by the invaders is about 65 miles south of the 38th parallel, including the captured southern capital at Seoul.

North Koreans are far superior in intelligence work and in psychological warfare. They have panicked well-held positions with rumors—a phony report of a break-through sent Americans fleeing from the Suwon air base last week.

North Korean Air Force Soviet-built Yak fighters have won minor nuisance victories with strafing attacks, but they are outclassed by the United States Air Force in sky battles.

An American officer said South Koreans fight with 25 percent ferocity, when they actually fight, and there has been no report that they have taken prisoners on a mass scale.

"If World War III broke out," the officer said, "South Korea would be safer than New York State."

Wounded and Dead Line Roads In Nightmare of Desolation

By O. H. P. King

An Advance American Command Headquarters in South Korea, (Wednesday) July 5 (AP).—Here is a picture of war's desolation in South Korea:

Thousands of South Korean army troops in retreat—some call it a rout.

More thousands of bewildered civilian refugees, some trudging in one direction, others going the opposite way. All are laden with pitifully small bundles.

Warplanes have passed this way, their gunfire raking the road.

The dead still lie along the roadway, and the wounded cry for aid and are ignored.

Scores of abandoned vehicles are along this highway I have just traveled for 180 miles through the nightmare area. Some had been strafed and burned, others had been run off the road and still others were left because of mechanical or fuel difficulties.

(Amid this scene of refugee turmoil, General MacArthur's headquarters communique warned, numbers of North Korean troops in civilian clothes were slipping south on missions of sabotage and espionage.

(The flight of civilians also was occurring north of the front, in areas already seized by the invaders. American fliers saw the highways east of Red-conquered Seoul jammed with thousands of refugees. Whether they were trying to escape the Reds and the new terror of the "People's Courts" or feared U. S. air raids was uncertain.

(A city that had swollen to nearly 2 million in the past five years—twice its previous population—Seoul is largely of insecure wood, plaster and straw construction).

I saw Brig. Gen. G. B. Barth of Leavenworth, Kans., the first American general I have seen on the field. He is far in advance of

Fayetteville, N. C., July 4 (AP).—Sergt. John W. Swetich set the world's record for consecutive parachute jumps to 113 tonight and was still going strong—his goal 150.

After his 112th jump shortly before 9 p. m., the 32-year-old veteran paratrooper from Dillon, Mont., said: "I feel fine. The air's fine. I'm going to keep on."

Swetich parachuted from a tiny Piper Cub airplane 107 times earlier today to erase the old mark of 105 jumps set by Juan Iriate of Buenos Aires, May 19, 1950. Iriate made his jumps in seven hours and 23 minutes.

Surprise Stroke

D. C. Marine Enlistment Quota Dropped; Sky's the Limit Now

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The local United States Marine Corps recruiting office in a surprise move yesterday wiped out its 12-men-a-month enlistment quota and challenged Washington youth to sign up.

The action followed by a day President Truman's announcement that some Marines had been ordered to the Korean battlefront.

"We'll take all the qualified men between the ages of 17 and 28 we can get," said Staff Sergt. Nick Gledich, recruiting office public information officer said in announcing the Fourth of July action.

Capt. W. F. Lloyd, officer in charge of the recruiting office at 1400 Pennsylvania ave., explained the quota-lifting was being tried in Washington as a "test" to see what the reaction will be.

In another extraordinary move, the local Leatherneck recruiting office remained open throughout the holiday yesterday.

"About a dozen men telephoned the office after the announcement went out over the radio", Captain Lloyd said last night. "We expect a busy day tomorrow," he added.

At the Pentagon, defense spokesmen emphasized that the quota-lifting was not a Naton-wide order. In fact, they were unaware of the action taken by the local Marine office.

Successful recruits must be physically qualified and pass a written examination. Volunteers are enlisted as privates at $75 a month.

First Contact Made with Foe; Invaders Claim Fall of Inchon

By O. H. P. King

Advanced American Headquarters in South Korea (Wednesday), July 5 (AP).—The first contact between American troops and North Korean Communist forces occurred today, headquarters announced.

The contact was made at 11 a. m. (8 p. m., EST), Tuesday, headquarters said, when American military fired upon North Korean tanks approaching toward American positions.

(A Tokyo headquarters communique yesterday said American troops had gone into action against the Reds but field headquarters consistently said they had not not until this announcement at 12:25 Japan daylight time today (9:25 p.m. EST Tuesday).

Earlier this morning a spokesman at advanced headquarters said a contact was expected within 24 hours.

An Army headquarters spokesman said "we have yet to get really positive confirmation of any Russian participation. Until we capture some and prove they are Russians, we have been told to stop reporting that any Russians are here."

Expect to Retake Suwon

The spokesman said the South Korean army withdrawal from the Suwon area was comparatively disorganized but "it was not a rout and these troops are being reformed."

No one here doubts that it is just a matter of time before Suwon and its airfield are again in South Korean hands. The airfield, largest in South Korea except for Seoul's Kimpo Airport, is capable of handling big four-engined C-54 transports.

In the meantime, however, the succession of retreats has caused much resentment on the part of American officers and men who feel the South Korean resistance should have stiffened since concrete evidence of American help was manifest.

Holiday Deaths By Violence Soar Above Record 700

By The Associated Press

Violent deaths soared above the 700 mark and approached the all-time record last night as the Nation neared the end of its four-day observance of its independence.

The total had climbed far above advance expectations, with the homeward trek of millions of highway travelers still under way last night. This was the death toll:

Total killed—711.
Traffic deaths—443.
Drownings—157.
Deaths from miscellaneous causes—111.

A bolt of lightning killed three persons and injured seven at Hamden, Conn., at a birthday party yesterday.

The National Safety Council had forecast that 385 would be killed in highway accidents in the 102-hour period from 6 p. m. local time Friday to Tuesday midnight.

People were being killed in activities associated with the holiday observance slightly faster than at a rate of one every 10 minutes.

Lightning Blacks Out Maryland U. Campus

The University of Maryland campus—including over 100 buildings—was blacked out at 9 p.m. last night, and was still without lights early today.

Police reported that lightning struck a transformer around 9 p.m. This was repaired in about 30 minutes. But another bolt hit a power line a few minutes later, again putting the campus in darkness.

More than 1500 persons—including summer school students and delegates to a teachers' convention were affected.

Mass Meetings

Russians Say They'll Fight 'For Peace'

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, July 4 (AP).—Moscow's newspapers gave their biggest headlines today to demands for the unconditional withdrawal of American forces from Korea.

The statement of Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko declaring the United Nations should see to it that United States forces are expelled from Korea was accompanied by reports of mass meetings throughout the Soviet Union voicing similar opinions.

At meetings of military men, speakers declared they would "fight for peace."

Accounts of the mass meetings in factories, institutes, clubs and other places, bore such headlines as "Hands Off Korea," "Out With Imperialists in Korea," "Wrathful Protest Against American Military Intervention," "Soviet People Unanimously Brand With Shame Criminal Action of American Government Against Korean People."

Vishinsky Vanishes

The Gromyko statement, first broadcast last night from Moscow, declared the United States step by step is involving itself in "open war," has presented the United Nations with a fait accompli by intervening in Korea and is making that body an appendage of the United States State Department.

(The fact that it was left to Gromyko to state the Soviet position raised speculation that Andrei Vishinski, the Foreign Minister, is not in Moscow. Vishinsky has not been in the news since May 15.

(Official sources in London said India has informed Russia and the United States she is ready to attempt to mediate on Korea. India voted in the Security Council for the resolution calling upon North Koreans to cease their aggression and withdraw. She abstained from a second resolution calling on U. N. members to give military aid to South Korea, but later informed the U. N. she was accepting that resolution too. At the same time, however, India expressed hope the trouble could be settled by mediation. The Indian government has taken the view that the unity of Korea is necessary to maintain peace.)

Hits Order to Navy

In his statement, Gromyko declared "the United Nations will only fulfill its obligation to maintain peace if the Security Council demands the unconditional cessation of American military intervention and the immediate withdrawal of the American armed forces from Korea."

His statement also charged that President Truman's orders to the Navy to prevent a Communist attack on Formosa was a direct aggression against China, Russia's ally, and that United States forces intend to seize all Korea as a "military and strategic springboard."

"America has committed a hostile act against peace and . . . bears the responsibility for the consequences," he declared.

Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper, quoted a captain as declaring at one protest meeting:

"The peoples of the world are expressing their decisive protest and demand that the government which first uses atomic weapons be adjudged a war criminal."

Cairo, Egypt, July 4 (AP).—The United States renewed its efforts yesterday to win Egypt from neutrality to open support for United Nations motion against the fighting in Korea.

United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery broke his Independence Day holiday to meet Egyptian Foreign Minister Salah Eddin Bey for the second time within 24 hours.

Caffery yesterday reportedly told the Foreign Minister America was "shocked" by Egypt's role as the the only non-Communist country to formally announce it did not support the Security Council's call for military aid for South Korea.

Salah Eddin conferred with Premier Mustapha Nahas Pasha and other Egyptian leaders last night.

Informed sources said Caffery today emphasized the importance the United States puts on the Korean issue. The veteran diplomat reportedly is trying to persuade the Egyptians of the merit of the United States position without offending them into stiffening their position—a difficult task in the opinion of other diplomats because of the touchy attitude of the government, press and public toward anything connected with the United States since the Palestine war.

That attitude stems from general Egyptian bitterness over what they consider United States support of Israel in the Palestine question.

Parliament of Israel Backs Korea Policy

Jerusalem, July 4 (U.P.).—The Israeli Parliament have the government a resounding vote of confidence tonight on its stand in support of United Nations steps to halt fighting in Korea.

The chamber approved, 68 to 20, a joint labor and general Zionist motion of confidence. There were eight abstentions. A motion of no-confidence submitted by the leftist Mapam group was defeated, 79 to 19.

Yank Artillery Blasting at Red Tanks; North Korean Planes Vanish from Sky

American and Australian planes operated over South Korea yesterday, unchallenged for the first time by Russian-built Yak fighters.

A communique said bad weather interrupted Allied operations in the morning, but improved later to permit 162 sorties, including strafing and cargo flights.

American and Australian planes met "moderate" antiaircraft fire over several enemy positions in South Korea, the communique said, but added:

"No hits were scored."

One Australian plane was damaged and probably destroyed in a landing accident on a Japanese base, but the pilot was not injured.

Twenty-three cargo flights were made from bases in Japan to carry on a vast airlift which already has landed a large—but unrevealed—number of men and equipment near the battle zone.

Low-flying fighters destroyed three trucks, one bus and two locomotives, set afire one locomotive and one car of a 12-car train in a strafinng attack northeast of Seoul, and destroyed a railroad trestle.

This was a comparatively light bag even for limited operations.

Returning pilots reported that Communist troop and supply columns were staying off the roads during daylight and making their advances at night.

Meanwhile, the Korean Communist radio at Pyongyang today claimed a Red amphibious force had advanced at least 15 miles inland from Korea's southeast coast in a drive to cut American communication lines.

A Red landing at Yongil Bay was reported last week by South Korean sources but has not been officially acknowledged since then.

The Red radio broadcast asserted the North Korean force was attacking the town of Kyongu, about 15 miles southwest of Yongil Bay.

It gave the objective of the thrust as Taejon, 40 miles inland.

Rail and highway routes from Pusan, port and American beachhead at the southern tip of the peninsula, run through Taejon.

General MacArthur's headquarters announced today that an estimated three or four North Korean divisions are south of the Han River.

The Communists have succeeded in flanking the line from Inchon to Suwon, "which has been holding for a few days," MacArthur's communique said.

The movement of American troops and supplies from Japan to South Korea is continuing, the communique added.

"Considerable naval activity" is reported on the east, with heavy naval barrages leveled principally at the North Korean bridgehead in the Samchok area.

MacArthur said no fatal American casualties were reported, but one American airman was reported missing.

North Korean Communists, in a powerful tank-led offensive, today threatened to clamp an iron ring around the faltering South Korea defenders in a broad zone south of Seoul.

A spokesman at advanced American headquarters in South Korea said the invader offensive already had overrun Suwon and the Suwon airstrip, 25 miles south of Seoul, and pushed on at least five miles farther south. He called it a "real, honest-to-God punch," using all elements of four or five northern divisions.

(The United Press reported that South Korean troops retreating southward from fallen Suwon joined forces with advance American ground units. It quoted an Army spokesman in Korea as saying there had been no attempts by the North Koreans to carry their advance beyond Suwon.)

Loss of Suwon was not confirmed by a communique from General MacArthur's headquarters this morning, but the communique described a dangerous and strong flanking action by the Reds.

The communique depicted the invaders as employing a wide sweep southeast of Seoul, simultaneously with a frontal action that brought fighting inside Inchon, Seoul's seaport city 20 miles west of the capital.

The communique indicated Inchon was under heavy Red pressure but still in South Korean hands. The North Korean high command asserted over the Seoul radio, however, that Inchon was "completely liberated" at 1:30 p. m., Tuesday (10:30 p. m., EST, Monday).

MacArthur's announcement said the entire Seoul-Suwon-Inchon triangle—an area of more than 200 square miles south and southwest of Seoul—was threatened by a Red encircling attempt. It indicated the Northern offensive had not been checked.

Korean weather turned bad today and air action was likely to be limited.

The spokesman at advanced headquarters reported no change in the siuation since Tuesday night. Presumably this referred principally to the Suwon area.

The current fluid state of the fighting in Korea, along with sketchy communications, made almost anything possible.

To add to the confused conflict, the Tokyo communique said Northern soldiers in civilian clothing were slipping southward from Seoul on sabotage and spying missions. American airmen said they saw thousands of civilians leaving Seoul, the Southern republic's capital, which the Reds captured June 28.

MacArthur's Wednesday morning communique reported a convoy of 25 Communist tanks was seen moving down from the Thirty-eighth Parallel border area to Seoul.

This indicated the Communist punch—which was powered in the first place by unexpectedly large numbers of Russian-built tanks when it was sprung June 25—still had reserve strength to keep it going.

In describing the flanking operation southeast of Seoul, MacArthur's communique listed three Red spearheads:

The original one in the vicinity of Kumyangjangni, 12 miles east of Suwon; another moving southwest through Yangpyong, 30 miles southeast of Seoul and 30 miles northeast of Suwon, aiming to join with the first, and a force of four tanks, five armored cars and 800 infantrymen shoving southwest from Chunchon and last seen 35 miles southeast of Seoul.

All of these columns already were on the south side of the Han River, chief natural barrier in a region of low hills and extensive rice paddies.

About 600 Northerners, supported by artillery and antitank weapons, clashed with the South Koreans near Kumyangjangni.

The communique also reported without detail that South Korean forces were "in contact" with a North Korean spearhead near Singal (also called singalli), five miles east and slightly south of Suwon.

The wide scooping movement from east of Seoul, through and south of Suwon, could bottle up any remnants of South Korean defense. There was no indication whether any Americans were in the threatened zone.

The communique indicated, however, that an escape corridor, between the west coast and Suwon, which is 10 miles inland, remained open, at least for the present.

Holding Inchon and the coastal strip southward also provided the possibility for reinforcing and supporting the defense by sea.

American and British naval forces reported minor engagements of undisclosed nature off the east coast was strafed by enemy planes.

American and Australian planes, although hampered by bad weather part of Tuesday, continued unspecified support of the ground defense.

The North Korean radio asserted the Northern capital city, Pyongyang, was raided heavily by American bombers Tuesday for the fifth consecutive day.

The Americans have reported only some attacks on Pyongyang's airfield, none on the city itself.

West Victor, 94 to 7, in Iran Voting

Tehran, Iran, July 4 (AP).—Premier Ali Razmara and his pro-American cabinet won an overwhelming vote of confidence in Parliament today. The tally was 94 to 7, with three abstentions.

Western diplomats hailed the appointment and confirmation of Razmara, who is also chief of staff of the Iranian army, as bracing the weak Iranian sector of the cold-war front at a strategic moment of the East-West struggle.

It is widely assumed here the United States now is satisfied that economic aid won't be dissipated by traditional Iranian government corruption and will launch such an aid program in the near future.

Razmara told Parliament today he intends to institute a drastic reform program. After the session, opposition members boycotted the American Embassy's party celebrating Independence Day. They charge United States intervention boosted Razmara into power.

Western observers term Razmara's assumption of power the most heartening gain for the West here in years. He seeks to pare down the bureaucracy that now eats up 70 percent of Iran's revenue, and to reduce sky-high living costs through price controls. Iran is now broke.

Alteration in Makeup of Armed Forces, Rather Than Mobilization, Is Held Likely

ent needs, however, is almost certain. While officials had no word of it yesterday, budget ceilings on recruiting and funds available for calling reservists to active duty with their consent undoubtedly will be lifted.

The Air Force only yesterday asked reserve electronic specialists to volunteer for active duty.

It said the call is to meet "normal requirements." The specialists, both commissioned and enlisted, will be used mainly for radar work. Officers will be taken for from six months to three years and airmen for from six to 21 months.

It must be emphasized that this was the view in official circles as of yesterday. A new development in the touchy world condition could change things overnight and a tightening of global tension or indications of new trouble from intelligence sources could alter the viewpoint to some degree.

It also does not mean that American armed forces will not be increased or that additional appropriations will not have to be asked.

In fact, it seems certain that the Joint Chiefs of Staff will recommend and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and President Truman will approve some bolstering of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, as well as money to replace weapons and equipment expended in the Korean fighting.

But this, officials emphasize, will come as a result of the altered world situation generally and not to put down the Korean breach of the peace.

Furthermore, it almost certainly means some alteration in the makeup of American armed forces, in the belief of most informed military men.

If the Korean attack and American intervention proves one thing, it demonstrates that some war plans concepts held by many in high place were too rigid and narrow. We now face a situation far different from that forecast by those who said trouble would start with a blitz attack on the United States and that we must sacrifice almost everything to keeping a powerful retaliatory air arm of A-bomb-carrying global bombers.

An all-out war still might begin that way, and the USFA Strategic Air Command remains one of our most potent weapons. It cannot be weakened. But if Russian strategy is to involve us with satellite forces here and there around the world, as seems likely to most informed persons in Washington, then we are going to need other things in increasing numbers.

The Army is short on corps and Army troops and wants to build up its existing divisions closer to full strength. Officials have maintained that we should have at least another division in being. That was before the events of the past 10 days.

The Air Force is woefully weak in the type of units and equipment needed for such an operation as Korea. It should have additional ground-support aviation, hasten the development of a proper airplane for the purpose and step up training in ground-air coordination, many insist.

USAF chiefs have admitted that they did not have all they should have in this field, but contended that within the framework of the 48-group Air Force, a "proper balance" existed between strategic and tactical aviation. Addition ground-support air could be built up after trouble starts, they have publicly stated, because American troops would not be ready to move overseas into action until much later

Now Army forces are in battle and this type of aviation was the first needed. All we had in numbers were F-80 jet fighters—largely interceptors without the range for the job—and B-29 Superforts. Air Force spokesmen yesterday said the latter might well be used for ground strafing and low-level bombing—a rather large and costly weapon for such purpose.

If a fire breaks out next in Iran or some other hot spot across the globe, more tactical aviation may be needed. So would additional aircraft carrier task forces and amphibious and aircraft lift. Another flattop or two, plus additional troop-carrier and other air transport forces, may be called for.

Thus if the world situation remains relatively unchanged, with Korean fighting continuing but not expanded into a more serious situation, and the prospect always before us of another similar outbreak, moderately larger, American armed forces seem likely, with much greater emphasis than before on balanced forces.

Top officials are anxious to avoid any full mobilization or use of the draft, call-up of the Guard or ordering in reserves without their consent for several good reasons. Chief among them is its effect on world opinion and particularly that in Russia, its satellites and nations like India.

There is little chance of the Kremlin putting over its propaganda that "American imperialists are trying to start a world war" by intervening in Korea, it is felt, if we are not mobilized. If we do mobilize it might well produce a counter-reaction that would bring on general war.

Meanwhile, there does remain a "Mobile Reserve" of close to six divisions in the United States. It consists of the Eighty-second and Eleventh Airborne, Second and Third Infantry, Second Armored and Second Marine Division.

Noting that this reserve exists, one official yesterday declared that mobilizing to meet the present Korean situation would be like greatly expanding the Washington police and declaring martial law because a small riot broke out at the ballpark. The present armed forces, like the police force, should be able to handle emergencies of such size.

Marine Chief Planned Attack on Iwo Jima

BRIG. GEN. E. A. CRAIG
. . . leads Marine troops

BRIG. GEN TOM CUSHMAN
. . . commands Air Wing

Brig. Gen. Edward A. Craig, who planned the historic assault on Iwo Jima, will lead the Marine forces being sent to the Far East.

Now assistant commander of the First Marine Division at Pendleton, Calif., he has been placed in command of the amphibious forces —a reinforced regimental combat team — heading for the Korean war.

Brig. Gen. Thomas J. Cushman will command the supporting Marine air units also ordered to reinforce General MacArthur. Cushman, 55, now is deputy commander of the First Marine Air Wing at El Toro.

Naval circles thought it likely yesterday that Cushman's aircraft — probably a group — will be shipped to the Far East aboard the aircraft carrier Philippine Sea, which is heading in the same direction about the same time the Marine ground units leave by fast transport.

Each of the two Leatherneck brigadiers has been in the Marines since 1917. Craig, 53, is a native of Danbury, Conn., and commanded the Ninth Regiment in the invasion of Bougainville. He was operations officer of the Fifth Amphibious Corps, handling the planning for and later operations at Iwo.

For "aggressive and courageous leadership and coolness under fire" in directing the capture of strategic high ground on the island, Craig received the Navy Cross.

Cushman won the Legion of Merit for directing the air defense of the Marianas—the bases from which the B-29s blasted Japan during World War II.

Red German Police Facing Duty in Korea

Berlin, July 4 .—Some members of East Germany's Communist People's Police have been slated to be shipped to Korea, a husky young deserter declared today.

His statement coincided with reports from Russian zone political sources that East Germany is expanding the police force, declared by the Western Powers to be an illegal army, by about 15,000 men to nearly 100,000 and is preparing to issue it new weapons.

The youth, 20, is one of more than 120 East Zone policemen who have deserted and sought political asylum in the West since May 1.

"I sneaked over to West Berlin because I did not feel like fighting for the Communists in Korea," he said. "I simply was afraid of the war and all the horrible things that go with it."

He said he was told secretly last week that he and 10 comrades were "to go into battle in Korea against the American imperialists."

The youth reported he joined the force as a private last year after a labor office gave him the choice of doing so or working in the Russian-operated uranium mines.

Informants close to the East German Ministry of the Interior said the People's Police are to get fresh equipment, including new weapons and motor vehicles, through an increase in budget appropriations raised by extra levies on the governments of the five states in the Russian zone. The police, trained in infantry, mortar and tank tactics, have been using some old Germany army material.

Anti-Communist German spokesmen have expressed fear that the Communists might some day use the force to create "another Korea" here with an attack on West Germany.

120 East German Police Desert in Two Months

Berlin, July 4 (U.P.)—West German police reported today that 102 East German police had deserted to Western authorities since May 1. Seven have asked for political asylum in the past two days, they said.

Navy Patrol Planes Will Escort Troops

Long-range Navy patrol planes—of the type used for antisubmarine defense—have been assigned to escort United States ships moving troops and equipment into the Korean war zone, it was announced yesterday.

The number and type of patrol planes thrown into the battle to halt Communist North Korean's invasion of South Korea was secret.

But a Navy spokesman said they will provide escort cover and antisubmarine patrol for transport ships ferrying American ground combat troops and equipment from Japan to the South Korean war front.

Most Navy patrol planes are land-based, twin-engined bombers such as the Martin Mariner of the Lockheed P2V Neptune.

Officials indicated the move was purely precautionary. North Korean's patrol-boat navy is not believed to include any undersea raiders. Russia has a large fleet of submarines, including some stationed in Siberian ports, but there has been no report so far of Soviet-made submarines being sighted in Korean waters.

'Dramatic' Change In Situation Foreseen

London, July 4 (AP).—Yun Tchi Chang, South Korean minister in London, tonight said he expected a dramatic change in the Korean fighting within a week.

Visitors attending a reception given by Philippines Minister Jose E. Romero and his wife crowded around the Korean, questioning him about the fighting. He replied:

"Wait a week and you will see a dramatic change in our situation."

Escaped Missionary Says Communists Organize Youths in Eastern Tibet

Calcutta, India, July 4 (U.P.).—An American missionary reached safety today after a 100-day flight from Tibet, and said that fighting and Communist lawlessness had increased on the Sino-Tibetan border.

Edgar Nichols, 51, Omaha, Nebr., reached Kalimpong, in the Himalayan foothills of north Bengal, after a 1000-mile trek with his wife and four Tibetan foster sons.

Nichols, who had spent 12 years among the warlike tribes in Batanga, eastern Tibet, said Gen. Liu Wen-hui, governor of the region, had joined the Communists and that Tibetan youths were being organized by the Reds.

Resistance groups still were fighting the Communists in scattered outlying districts when he left, Nichols said.

The Nicholses, who have four children of their own in the United States, said they would give the four Tibetan boys a broad education and then send them back to help develop their native land.

Watch Other 'Borders,' Kimball Urges Nation

Azusa, Calif., July 4 (U.P.).—Navy Undersecretary Dan A. Kimball warned the Nation today against letting the Korean war draw its attention "from our other frontiers."

"We must not permit our attention to be drawn from the ever-present threat posed by Soviet psychological aggression," he said in a speech prepared for a Fourth of July celebration here.

He said this aggression includes Communist attempts to cause trouble between management and labor.

Rebel Threat to Saigon Oil Wells Is Foiled

Saigon, Indo-China, July 4 (U.P.).—French and Viet Nam troops have destroyed a rebel Minh band threatening oil wells south of Saigon, a military communique said today.

The action took place near Nhabe, 12 miles south of Saigon. It was supported by light naval units. Sixty prisoners were taken as well as documents and munitions, the communique said.

Red Fleet Is Warned To Intensify Vigilance

Moscow, July 4 (U.P.).—The Russian navy's official organ Red Fleet today warned that as long as the capitalist world exists the Soviet Union will be under threat of attack.

It declared that the Soviet people will take "all measures" to see that their armed forces are ready for defense.

"The navy now," it said, "is carrying on intensive summer training under conditions approaching actual combat."

The special Red Fleet article, in conjunction with Navy Day, July 23, said that while Russia is engaged in peaceful pursuits, the American and English "imperialists" are plotting war. It cited aggression against "Korea and China."

Patriarch of Ukraine Accuses Britain, U. S.

London, July 4 (U.P.).—A leading Russian clergyman, the Patriarch of the Ukraine, accused Britain and the United States today of "aggressive actions against the people of Korea," Radio Moscow reported.

He became the first Soviet clergyman to attack the Western policy on Korea along the lines followed by Soviet government leaders and newspapers.

Radio Free Europe Begins Test Broadcasts

New York, July 4 (U.P.).—Radio Free Europe began its "test pattern" broadcasts to Iron Curtain countries today, to build up an audience before its regular broadcasts telling of freedom and democracy begin on July 14.

Frank Altschul, chairman of the committee of private citizens that will conduct the broadcasts to complete the official Voice of America, said that for the next 10 days the broadcasts will be limited to announcements telling of the plans and purposes of the new station.

GIs Win 4-0 in First Guerilla Skirmish

With American forces on the Korean Front, July 4 (U.P.).—GIs observed the Fourth of July today by fighting and winning their first battle since Japan surrendered nearly five years ago.

American infantrymen, many of whom saw action throughout the world in World War II, celebrated the 174th anniversary of the signing of the United States Declaration of Independence with "fireworks" that sent Communist partisans running.

The 5½-hour "battle" wasn't much more than a local skirmish, but it gave the American troops their baptism of ground fire in Korea. With the firing of the first shots, it seemed likely that GIs soon would be in action clear across the 200-mile-wide Korean peninsula.

The GIs fought against 30 Communist guerillas in the outer defense perimeter of Pyongtaek, 40 miles south of captured Seoul.

When it was over, four Communists were dead and the rest had fled. There were no American casualties.

The Americans and North Koreans made contact as the GIs took up defensive positions. The guerilla band heaved hand grenades at the Americans. The Americans responded with mortar fire. The fight lasted five and a half hours.

The United States troops prepared to halt the North Korean advance. Then will come the task of driving the Communist invaders back across the 38th parallel border into their own country.

North Korean forces meanwhile continued a limited offensive. They threatened Chunjet City, southeast of Suwon. Enemy columns of battalion strength also were reported moving south from Wonju in an apparent effort to split the South Korean forces in the Suwon area.

Among the Americans at the front is Sergt. Billy McCarthy of Massillon, Ohio, who will be seeing ground action for the first time. He served in the merchant marine during World War II.

"It is not going to be a snap," McCarthy said. "But the sooner we clean up this, the sooner we can get the hell out of here."

Veteran Dies In Fire Rescue

ton. Both escaped, police said, by jumping through a window.

Police said that a party had been going on at the house prior to the fire, which was reported at 2:10 a. m. Cause of the blaze is being investigated, but police say that it may have been caused by a cigarette or a candle in the kitchen.

Firefighters arrived on the scene to find no access roads available. To get equipment to the house, they stretched an aerial ladder across the canal and lashed a 14-foot ladder to its end to reach the ground. Firemen then carried hose across it.

3 Companies Respond

Engine Companies No. 5 and No. 23 and Truck Company No. 5 responded to the fire.

Pickett, who died of third-degree burns, was pulled from the burning house by other visitors there. He had been found lying unconscious on the floor of the front room, police said.

Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg said that he will issue a certificate of accidental death in both fatalities.

Mrs. Shrout was treated at Gallinger Hospital for shock and a possible back injury suffered when she flung herself from a window. Swartz was treated at Gallinger for burns to the body.

A third person, Lynn Newlon, 58, an occupant of the house, escaped uninjured.

Vicky Quirino Wed in Splendor Of Manila Presidential Palace

PALACE WEDDING—Victoria, 19, only daughter of Elpidio Quirino, President of the Philippines, was married to Luis M. Gonzales in a ceremony in the Malacanan Palace in Manila yesterday. Gonzales, a graduate of the University of California, is a member of one of the wealthiest families in the Philippines. Wedding of the couple (above) was attended by the highest officials of the islands and the diplomatic corps

Manila, July 4 (AP).—Victoria (Vicky) Quirino, 19-year-old daughter of the Philippines President, was married tonight in a glittering ceremony at the presidential palace on this nation's fourth anniversary of its independence.

The bridegroom was Luis Gonzales, 24-year-old scion of a wealthy Manila family. Vickey cut a regal figure as she was led to the altar by President Elpidio Quirino. A thousand of the highest official, diplomatic and social figures of the Philippines looked on.

The ceremony was performed by the Archbishop of Manila, Msgr. Gabriel Reyes.

Vicky, who had six bridesmaids, wore a satin gown in Filipina style, with a train 5 yards long. Her 15-yard veil was held in place by a tiara of diamonds and pearls, a family heirloom.

2 Sentenced to Death In Rumania Spy Trials

Bucharest, July 4 (UP). — Two persons were sentenced to death and five others to prison terms today at the conclusion of a high-treason trial that linked Bishop Gerald Patrick O'Hara of Atlanta, Ga., with an espionage ring.

O'Hara is now papal nuncio in Bucharest. Evidence presented at the trial alleged that he spied on Romania.

U. S. Believed Ahead Of Reds' Food Output

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

How does the United States compare with Russia in agricultural production? That's a question that is stumping the experts.

Wars can't be fought without food and clothing, any more than they can without guns and ammunition. Information about the enemy's supplies are a part of military intelligence. However, there is a lot of guessing in our intelligence about Russian production.

As an example of the confused thinking, this reporter can quote the reactions of two of the Department of Argiculture's top specialists on world farming.

Stanley Andrews, director of the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations, just returned from London, declared his latest information was that Russia is in a favorable position agriculturally. He thought the Soviet Union had recovered from World War II on a par with western Europe.

Fred J. Rossiter, Andrews' deputy, had a different report. He said he put his top experts on the question last week. They came up with the reply that Russia has not staged the comeback other European countries have, and nothing at all to compare with the accomplishments of North America, particularly the United States.

The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, which should be in the best position of any group in the world to reach a near estimate, indicates Rossiter is right. An FAO report released this week showed Soviet production of bread grains (rye and wheat) has almost reached its prewar figures, although production per hectare is considerably less.

FAO estimated wheat and rye production in the USSR in 1949 totaled 53.4 million metric tons (2204.6 pounds, or 36.74 bushels of wheat or 39.37 bushels of rye). In 1934-38 the average production was 54.8 million tons. Against these figures, North America produced 42.4 million metric tons, against only 28.2 in the prewar years.

In coarse grains from which we get meat, milk, cheese, butter and other dairy products, poultry and eggs, North America showed a big increase. Last year production of corn, oats and barley in North America reached a stupendous 121.8 million metric tons, compared with only 81.2 before World War II. On the other hand Russia produced only 21.5 million tons, compared with only 30.7 tons in the prewar period.

The rest of Europe, outside the USSR, showed a much better comeback from war's ravages than Russia, according to FAO. Europe produced 58.1 million tons of bread grains in 1949, as compared with 61.4 before the war; it produced 49.7 tons of coarse grains against 54.8.

"Estimated world production in 1949 of the five principal grain crops—wheat, rye, barley, oats and maize—though 7 percent greater than the 1934-38 average, declined by 4 percent from the 1948 level," FAO stated. "The grain area cultivated in 1949 was practically the same as in 1934-38 and slightly larger than in 1948."

There are no guesses available by either FAO or OFAR as to Russia's production of dairy products, eggs, poultry, fruits, etc., so no comparison is possible there. However, it is generally understood that in these, as well as cotton, this country is far ahead.

In spite of all our troubles with overproduction of potatoes, Russia raised seven times as many. Much of the Russian crop is fed to livestock through a laborious process of cooking it in open kettles on the farms. Russia's national drink, vodka, is a potato product.

Last year, according to our Agriculture Department, Russia harvested 2713 million bushels of potatoes as compared with 2800 millions in the prewar year. The United States raised 401 million compared with 355.

There are no late figures on Russia's meat production. In 1934-38 the USSR averaged seven billion pounds a year, and there are reasons to believe it is below that now. On the other hand, the United States last year raised 22 billion pounds, against 16 billion before the war.

Russia produced 315 million pounds of wool last year, against 310 prewar. This country produced only 259 million pounds, against 452 prewar. Last year the lamb and sheep numbers in this country reached the lowest since the Civil War.

Russia has another load on its shoulders—the job of meeting a famine in China. Although it is now acknowledged that the China famine is not as serious as earlier believed, it still means that much food must be sent into the interior to avoid great loss of life. Reports as to this year's crop in China are confusing. Most observers think it much better than last year.

Mundt Bill To Curb Reds Faces Fight

By the United Press

Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), said yesterday that Communist Party Chairman William Z. Foster has ordered a well-financed "last-ditch campaign of misrepresentation" against his Communist-control bill.

Mundt made the charge in a formal statement urging his Senate colleagues to prepare for a "deluge" of leftist-inspired telegrams and letters opposing the measure. It would subject Communists and Red-front groups to the stiffest restrictions in United States history.

He voiced hope the campaign would be counteracted by letters supporting the legislation.

Mundt, who made two unsuccessful efforts to get the bill before the Senate last weekend, warned he will persist in his campaign. He said the Korean war underscores the necessity of taking stropg action to curb domestic Communists.

The bill, which was cosponsored by Senators Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Olin D. Johnson (D., S. C.), has been approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee, but Senate Administration leaders have been lukewarm.

It would require members of the Communist Party and front groups to register with the Justice Department, deny Federal jobs and passports to Communists, plug alleged "loopholes" in the espionage laws and outlaw any effort to dictatorship in this country.

Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said he plans to bring the measure before the Senate Democratic Policy Committee shortly and will not "sidestep" the issue. He has not committed himself for or against the bill.

Canada's Living-Cost Index Sets Record

Ottawa, July 4 (U.P.).—Canada's cost of living index hit a record high of 165.4 points June 1 as a result of sharp increases in the cost of meat in May.

The Statistics Bureau reported today that the index jumped 1.4 points during the month. It was the first recorded increase in living costs since March.

Nine Hungarian Socialist Leaders Reported Seized

Vienna, July 4 (U.P.).—The Hungarian Communist regime has arrested nine leading Socialists, the Austrian Socialist newspaper, Arbeiter Zeitung, reported today.

Arbeiter Zeitung said it has received "most reliable reports" that Communist political police had seized:

Anna Kethly, former deputy chairman of the Socialist Party; Imre Gyoerky, former member of Parliament and party secretary; Franz Szeder, Franz Takasc and Laszlo Buechler, all former members of Parliament; Peter Bechtler, former Budapest mayor; Agostin Valentiny, former Minister of Interior; Wilhelm Zentay, former State Secretary, and Armin Ladanyi, former president of the Hungarian Lawyers Union.

Korean Aid Inescapable, Ike Tells Scouts

Valley Forge, Pa., July 4 (U.P.).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower tonight declared that American assistance to South Korea was "inescapable" to avoid "another kind of Munich."

The former Supreme Allied Commander told 47,000 Boy Scouts attending the second national Scout Jamboree that nothing can justify "alliance with the forces of dictatorship and Communistic enslavement."

Eisenhower said "the world is now locked in an intense struggle of opposing political systems."

"One of these," he said, "is the free system under which we live; the other is the Communistic doctrine . . . The outcome is vital to us and to the future . . . Any among us who embraces communism or its purposes thereby becomes an enemy of America. By no juggling of words or twisting of ideas can a citizen of this country justify an alliance with the forces of dictatorship and Communistic enslavement."

Eisenhower said the United States must support those countries allied to it "by common devotion to the freedom of men."

"The cost of effective help is great and risks are sometimes fearful," he said. "But the alternative is an enslaved world . . .

"At this moment, a friendly republic suffers outrageous invasion. The South Koreans' only crime has been the desire to live their own lives as they choose, at peace with the rest of the world.

"The American decision to assist them was inescapable. The alternative would be another kind of Munich, with all the disastrous consequences that followed in the wake of that fatal error 12 years ago. Now, our decision must be carried to its conclusion by whatever means are necessary."

NOTICE TO WATER CONSUMERS
IN THE
WASHINGTON SUBURBAN SANITARY DISTRICT

Due to the advent of hot weather the water consumption of the Sanitary District has now reached such amount that greater conservation in the use of water from the public supply must be exercised to properly protect the public health and safety.

IT IS THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT PURSUANT TO THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 10, CHAPTER 122 OF THE ACTS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF MARYLAND OF 1918 AND AMENDMENTS THERETO, IT SHALL BE UNLAWFUL FOR ANY PERSON, FIRM OR CORPORATION, OR HIS, HER OR THEIR AGENTS OR EMPLOYEES TO USE ANY WATER SUPPLY FURNISHED BY THIS COMMISSION FOR THE PURPOSE OF WATERING OR SPRINKLING ANY LAWNS, SHRUBBERY, FLOWERS OR GARDENS, OR FOR ANY PURPOSE OTHER THAN FOR FAMILY OR BUSINESS USE WITHIN THE BUILDING AFTER JULY 1, 1950, UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE BY THIS COMMISSION, EXCEPT THAT THE WATERING OF PLANTS AND SHRUBBERY BY THE USE OF A SPRINKLING CAN OR BUCKET, WITHOUT THE USE OF A HOSE OR PIPES, AND OF NEWLY LAID SOD UNDER THE CONDITIONS OF A SPECIAL PERMIT, WILL BE PERMITTED.

Some of the necessary works to augment the water supply and the distribution system of the Sanitary District have been completed and the remainder should be completed well before next summer so that it will not be necessary to impose similar restrictions on the use of water. The cooperation of the people in the conservation of water is therefore earnestly requested at this time. If it is forthcoming there will be, barring unforeseen major accident, enough water for the essential needs of the community and to provide for the tremendous building operations now occurring in the area.

Chiang Sinks 20 Red Invasion Troopships

Taipei, Formosa, July 4 (AP).—Naval headquarters said Nationalist warships sank 20 troop laden vessels Monday, thwarting a Chinese Communist attempt to invade the Tachen Islands.

The Tachens, between Shanghai and Formosa, are shown only on detailed maps. They are only 20 miles from the mainland.

Naval headquarters declared that the action was of a purely defensive nature—and as such in no way violated the Nationalist suspension of sea and air operations against the Red China mainland.

The ban was imposed last Wednesday at President Truman's behest after he declared the United States would support Korea, Nationalist China and Indonesia against Communist attack. But President Truman specified the Nationalists must not attack the Communists of the mainland.

The Tachens are defended by guerillas, local militia and at most only a few regular troops. The Red attempt to seize them was the first action of its kind since the Nationalists suspended their air blows at the mainland Reds.

2 Dead, 12 Hurt As Racing Car Leaves Track

Pageland, S. C., July 4 (U.P.).—A stock car in an Independence Day race hurtled into a knot of spectators at the Pageland Beach track infield today, killing two persons and injuring at least 12 others.

Witnesses said the car, driven by Cecil Clark of Charlotte, N. C., lost a wheel on a turn and sliced through the fragile board railing circling the inside of the dirt track. Clark was hurt.

The dead were identified as Clyde Hurbert McManus, Chesterfield County farmer, and his wife, Lillian. Another man, Billy Revel, was reported "very critically injured and not expected to live."

The injured were taken to a hospital in Monroe, N. C. Attendants there identified them as Donald Willis of Lancaster, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. John R. Bohwinkle of Buffalo, N. Y.; Henry Carlson of Buffalo, Mr. and Mrs. John Knight of Lancaster, William and Edward Verble of Concord, N. C.; Calvin Hudson, Stevenson Braswell of Shelby, N. C., and Dennis Broome of Kannapolis, N. C.

Man-Made Rain Fails To Quench Forest Fire

San Bernardino, Calif., July 4 (AP).—An attempt to quell a forest fire with man-made rain apparently failed today.

Pilot Robert Symons reported dry ice crystals created snow in thunder clouds above a five-day-old blaze on 11,485-foot Mount San Gorgonio, but he said he feared heat below prevented the moisture from reaching the flames. Temperatures were near the 100-degree mark.

Doyle and the Flaig boy planned to see last Friday's ball game at the Polo Grounds. However, they found out at the last minute that it was a night game. So they changed plans and went today.

Spectators around Doyle were not aware of any mishap until he collapsed in his seat. Then most of them thought he had been taken suddenly ill. The ball game went on as scheduled.

Mob Seizes Man Sought for Rape, Murder, Kidnaping

Williston, Fla., July 4 (U.P.).—A former convict murdered a 70-year-old woman, attempted to kill his aunt and raped a telephone operator before being captured by several hundred angry citizens, police reported today.

State Attorney T. E. Duncan said Charlie Rogers, 21, confessed to charges of murder, rape and kidnaping before he was taken to an undisclosed jail. Duncan said feeling here was running high.

Police Chief P. L. Wiggins said Rogers became enraged last night when elderly Miss Gertrude Hammond and his aunt, Mrs. Ruby Horne, 45, reprimanded him for excessive drinking and failure to repay borrowed money.

Seizing a .22-caliber rifle from his room at Mrs. Horne's residence, Rogers returned to Miss Hammond's home, and shot her from outside the kitchen window, Wiggins said.

He also fired at Mrs. Horne, Wiggins said, but she dropped to the floor and crawled to the front of the house.

Tito Attends U. S. Embassy's July 4 Party

Belgrade, July 4 (NYHT).—Premier Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia attended an American Fourth of July party tonight at Bled, Yugoslavia's informal summer capital, according to reports received here tonight.

It is rare for Marshal Tito to accept invitations to receptions given by foreign envoys and his arrival at the summer residence of American Ambassador George V. Allen, on Lake Bled, was regarded in Western diplomatic circles as a distinctly cordial gesture toward United States during the present international tension over the Korean war.

Edvard Kardelj, Yugoslavia's Foreign Minister, one of the three top Yugoslav leaders denounced along with Marshal Tito by the Cominform in 1948, also attended.

Belgrade's newspapers today hailed the armed intervention by the United States in Korea.

Krakatua Volcano In New Eruption

Jakarta, U. S. I., July 4 (AP).—Krakatua volcano, which juts a steaming head out of the sea between Java and Sumatra, blew its top yesterday. The crew of a Dutch ship said mud and stones were hurled half a mile into the air in four rapid eruptions.

Krakatua blew itself clear out of the water in 1883 and set off a tidal wave that killed 36,000 Indonesians on nearby islands. In the past 20 years it has built itself up above the sea's surface again in a series of minor eruptions.

France's 2-Day-Old Cabinet Ousted by Socialists and Reds

Parliament last Friday, in the face of appeals to end the crisis in view of the Korean developments, but that was before he had announced his cabinet list.

The Socialists overthrew the previous coalition government headed by Georges Bidault because of their demands for higher wages for civil servants. They also overthrew three French governments before that.

Communist Leader Jacques Duclos, in an Assembly speech in connection with questions submitted by himself and two other extreme leftists, attacked Queuille's government as one of "poverty, fascism and war."

The Assembly began voting at 6:30 p. m. (1:30 p. m. EDT). At 7:45 p. m. (2:45 p. m. EDT) Queuille and his disconsolate ministers, some of whom had not even taken over the new posts officially, went to the Elysee Palace and handed their resignations to Auriol.

Then they walked out silently, and declined to comment.

Queille's government was France's fourteenth since 1944. A previous government that the 66-year-old Radical Socialist headed from September, 1948, to October, 1949, had set a postwar French record for long life. His latest government, in contrast, set a new shortterm record. The previous record was set by Robert Schuman, and that lasted from August 31 to September 7, 1948.

In the current crisis, Auriol had nearly exhausted the field of candidates for the Premiership. Before calling on Queuille, he had sought in vain to get three other middle-of-the-road leaders to take the job.

Net Corporation Capital Hits High Of $69 Billion

United States corporations built up their net working capital to a record high 69 billion dollars at the end of March, the Securities and Exchange Commission reported last night.

There was a $1,300,000,000 increase in their operating funds during the first three months of this year, although they also invested $3,400,000,000 in plant and equipment during that time.

The SEC said both an increase in assets and a decline in liabilities contributed to the rise in net working capital.

The capital expansion came chiefly from internal sources. Undistributed profits and depreciation accruals amounted to $3,600,000,000.

Status of Freedom In World Outlined

By the United Press

The Nation "conceived in liberty" 174 years ago celebrated the anniversary of its independence yesterday with the struggle for freedom raging in other lands.

Waist-coated and bewigged colonists who declared our independence would find their call for freedom of thought, of speech, of press, of religion echoing across the centuries in many nations where liberty lies shackled not only by tradition but by a twentieth century tyranny.

After the American and French revolutions, after two World Wars and in the face of another world crisis, only a dozen countries have 100 percent freedom of speech and press.

Correspondents Polled

The United Press called on correspondents in almost every corner of the world to determine the human freedom in the world today.

Their findings are only approximate but as accurate as men who are veterans at reporting can humanly be.

Of 36 nations considered in the composite report, only 10 apparently enjoy more freedom than the United States. They are France, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Italy, Switzerland and Uruguay.

One hundred percent freedom of speech and press existed in only 12 of the 36; 24 had 100 percent freedom of religion; four had 100 percent social equality; one had full political equality; none had 100 percent equality of economic opportunity.

Lowest in Asia

Asiatic countries rated lowest in all the freedoms. For human freedom is not a common word in the Far East, not even in political vocabularies in many Asiatic lands.

Of all Asiatic lands considered, Japan appeared to have the highest freedom, with the Philippines a close second.

Country	Freedom of Speech and Press	Freedom of Religion	Social Equality	Political Equality	Equality of Economic Opportunity
United States	100	100	75	90	80
Britain	100	100	90	95	75
France	100	100	90	90	75
Eire	95	100	75	95	75

North Korea	40	75	80	50	50
Red China	30	75	95	50	50

Siam	85	100	80	75	75
India	?	50	50	50	50
Indochina	50	?	75	50	50

Note: There is no freedom of speech and press in Japan for open attacks on the Occupation Forces, by either left or right wing elements. In South Korea, there is no freedom of speech and press for Communists or other violent critics of the government, nor is there political equality for Communists.

In North Korea, freedom of press and speech does not exist for anti-Communists or critics of the government. The Communist-led Huk guerillas of the Philippines also do not have political equality.

War Means Sacrifice—Dulles

papers, umbrellas, and upturned chairs against the rain as the Sesquicentennial celebration, "Salute to Independence," was rung off the stage at 8:45 p. m. by the downpour.

The 30-minute fireworks display went on immediately in a flurry of explosions, a riot of color, and a chorus of mingled oh's and ah's.

The celebration got under way at 7:30 p. m. with concerts by the Navy, Marine and Army bands. Venders hawked ice cream, popcorn, balloons, and new Sesquicentennial medals to the people who streamed into the grounds.

Cartwright Invocation

Invocation was delivered by Msgr. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthews Cathedral.

Immediately afterwards, massed colors carried by more than 40 military, veterans, and patriotic groups, marched down the huge center aisle from the Monument to the stage for the playing of the National anthem.

Groups carrying the 200 flags ranged from members of all the armed forces and the D. C. National Guard to the Ladies of the G. A. R., the Disabled American Veterans and the American Legion.

Vocalist Roy Roberts and the 120-voice Sesquicentennial Chorus, directed by Paul Galloway, gave a specially-written musical greeting to the monument crowd. The red, white and blue-robed chorus was introduced by Carter Barron, general chairman of the "Salute to Independence."

As Dulles completed his address, storm clouds banked up heavily to the South, but the Parker Brothers got through their casual acrobatic routine, and torch singer Nancy Donovan finished her two songs before a drop fell.

Ballet Drenched

The sudden downpour caught the Marian Venable ballet troupe in the middle of an entrechat, and sent them scurrying for the exits.

Cut out by the soaking downpour were a group of singing cowboys, a wire-walking act, and an elaborate musical salute, "The Spirit of Independence Day".

Almost immediately, the fireworks began, flanked by pyrotechnic pictures of George Washington, Harry Truman, and the American flag.

A replica of the Liberty Bell, suspended over the stage, was rung as skyrockets lit the area with gold, blue, red, and green flashes.

N. Y. Firm's Export License Suspended

A New York firm's export license privileges were suspended yesterday for six months by the Commerce Department for attempting to ship a chemical used in rubber manufacture behind the Iron Curtain.

The department's Office of Industry and Commerce said Leon N. Rodell tried to get an export permit for 66,000 pounds of tetraethyl-thiuram-disulphide by listing Switzerland as its destination. Rodell did not contest the finding.

Navy Smash May Have Halted Landing

By the United Press

The United States Navy may have smashed a Red Korean "leapfrog" operation aimed at landing invading troops on the coast behind the South Korean defense lines.

The possibility arose yesterday when a Navy spokesman told a press "briefing" session that four North Korean motor trawlers of 200 tons and three 100-tonners were destroyed by United States naval forces July 3.

General MacArthur's headquarters previously had announced that a light cruiser sank 11 North Korean vessels in two days. It said the Navy previously announced sinking five Red PT boats.

While no mention was made whether the trawlers carried troops, it was believed significant that the action occurred on the Pacific side of the peninsula, away from the heavy land fighting in the Seoul-Suwon area.

Mapes Holds RFC Loan to Hotel 'Legitimate One'

Reno, Nev., July 4 (AP).—Hotel Owner Charles W. Mapes, jr., today called "ridiculous" senatorial protests over a Government loan to his hotel here.

"The loan is a perfectly legitimate one backed by the Mapes family and gambling or gamblers had nothing to do with it," said Mapes, whose father made a fortune in cattle in Nevada.

"If Washington wants to investigate gambling, it should do so without dragging a lot of innocent people into it," he added.

Members of a Senate Banking Subcommittee yesterday criticized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for lending the Mapes hotel $975,000.

British Labor Party Decides To Expel Korea Policy Foes

London, July 4 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Clement Attlee's government today decided on harsh measures to stamp out Red-tinged opposition within the Labor Party on the Korean issue.

Attlee's Labor Government made ready to expel any Labor Party member who does not approve of armed United Nations intervention in Korea to halt Communist aggression there.

The Government may ask for a vote of confidence in the House of Commons Wednesday on its Korean policy. Any Socialist who votes negatively will be voting for the downfall of his own government and, therefore, will be liable to explusion.

Attlee, despite his thin majority in the House, is taking no chances. The Conservatives and the Liberals already have voiced their approval of the Government's action. But a handful of left-wingers, following the Communist line, have asserted that the U. N. decision to send armed forces to Korea was illegal since Russia was not present for the Security Council vote.

The motion asking for "full support" was presented in Parliament tonight by Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison. It is designed to make the dissidents put up or shut up. Expulsion from the Labor Party generally ends the career of a Socialist. In the February general election not a single ousted member was returned to Parliament.

The House will debate the motion, but will not vote on it unless the rebellious Socialist backbenchers demand it at the end of the debate. Thus the motion—so far—is a sort of club to force Labor rebels back in line.

The Cabinet met for two hours this morning, but none of the defense ministers was present and the Korean situation was believed not to have been discussed. It was gone over fully at yesterday's long session.

Fight for Korean Freedom Will Be Costly

Following is the complete text of "America and Korea: The Interdependence of Independence," a speech delivered by John Foster Dulles, special consultant to the State Department, at the Sesquicentennial Commission's 4th of July celebration last night at the Washington Monument grounds:

WE MEET here to celebrate our day of freedom. Our thoughts turn back to the glorious past when our forebears fought despotism and won liberty. We should always keep those memories fresh. Happily, however, we are a Nation that lives not only on its past but in its present. Tonight our thoughts are irresistibly drawn to Korea, that young republic where our soldiers, sailors and airmen are again fighting for freedom. We can say with pride that our spirit today is the spirit of '76 and that our living today is faithful to the principles on which our Nation was founded.

Our founders felt that they were conducting a great experiment in human liberty. From the beginning they were inspired by a sense of mission. They were consciously building not for themselves alone but for the benefit of all mankind.

THE Declaration of Independence is expressed not in terms of American rights but in terms of natural moral rights of all men. It proceeds from the promise that "all men are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights" and the Founding Fathers made it clear that they were setting a pattern of freedom for men everywhere.

Largely under the inspiration of that example, with the nineteenth century became a great period of liberalism, when human beings freed themselves from the yoke of despotism. Wherever they sought to do so they had the support of the United States.

We early established the Monroe Doctrine, to warn Czarist Russia and its allies to keep their hands off the republics of this hemisphere whose continuing independence, we said, was vital to our own peace and happiness. Toward the end of the nineteenth century we enunciated the "Open Door" policy for China, to help the Chinese people develop in their own way free of alien domination. In this twentieth century we have joined in two world wars when the freedom of the West was imperiled by military despotism. Five years ago we signed the United Nations Charter and thereby pledged ourselves to seek universal respect for the human rights and fundamental freedoms and the preservation of political independence as against violent attack.

THE history of our nation makes a consistent, unfolding pattern. We have supported human freedom and political independence throughout the world both as a matter of good morals and because we saw that our own freedom was an integral part of total human freedom.

The United States can never be isolationist and it never will be so long as we are true to our heritage. An isolationist American would be a contradiction in terms, for America has from the beginning been a symbol of the universal cause of human liberty. What we are doing today is in keeping with the tradition of our past.

I was in Korea only two weeks ago and saw with my own eyes that that Republic was a land of freedom. The people had just had their second general election. Eighty percent of the eligible voters had gone to the polls. A majority of the representatives elected were independent of the party which controlled the election machinery and the police force. That is proof of real political liberty.

I TALKED WITH leading educators and attended a gathering of professors and students at one of their leading universities. I spent an evening of religious worship with 3000 Christian refugees who had fled from the northern dictatorship of atheistic communism so as to enjoy the religious liberty of the Republic of Korea. The people were happy and industrious and using energetically their new-found freedom.

The society was so wholesome that it could not be overthrown from within. That had been tried and failed. So early Sunday morning, nine days ago, open aggression was brought into play. Without warning, heavy tank formations drove down from the north, moving through the valleys to converge first upon the capital of Seoul, then to fan out to the south. They were preceded and covered by combat planes which, swooping low, machinegunned and terrorized the civilian population. The forces of the republic had no combat planes, tanks or heavy artillery fire with which to oppose them.

The long-prepared, suddenly exploded, ruthless attack was characteristic of military despotism. It was, in miniature, the kind of attack that could hit us if we are content to live in a world where such methods are tolerated. The struggle in Korea represents the timeless issue of whether lovers of liberty will be vigilant enough, brave enough and united enough to survive despotism.

THE United States, as a member of the United Nations, had helped to create the Korean Republic. We had given it economic aid. We alone of the free world had military strength in the immediate area. We were the logical first defenders of the liberty that had been assaulted.

It was, however, important that we should not act alone or without international sanction. The United Nations had been established for the very purpose of dealing with such situations. Its Security Council met within a few hours of the opening of the assault. All of the members were present, except only the Soviet Union, which sought by absence to veto restraint on the aggressive action of its satellite in North Korea. The Council nevertheless, acted. It had a direct report from its own commission in Korea and in the light of that report, unhesitatingly, branded the attack as a breach of the peace. It called upon the member states to assist to repel it.

President Truman, with bipartisan support, acted promptly and vigorously to bring the United States to respond to that appeal. The governments of many other members of the United Nations did likewise.

THUS we see international authority at work to prevent the committing, against he Republic of Korea, of what I call "international murder."

The task undertaken is not a light one and before it is finished we shall all of us have to pay a price. Already today in Korea our youth are beginning to pay the final price of life itself. The rest of us may have to cut down on our economic indulgence so that out of our great productive capacity, we can help our friends to match the offensive power which the Soviet Union, out of its economic poverty, supplies to its friends.

I am confident that what has happened in Korea will arouse the American people. We have never flinched when a great principle was involved. We are engaged today in the same battle which was begun in 1776. Our own liberty cannot long be safe in a world where despots can strike down liberty, piecemeal, with fire and sword.

WE HAVE today the great opportunity to join with the other free societies to prove that unprovoked aggression does not pay. If we sternly teach that lesson in terms of the North Korean adventure, then our own peace will be more secure than ever before. But if the free world fails to rally to the support of one of its stricken members, then one by one others would be struck down and military despotims, intoxicated by repeated victories, would lose all sense of restraint.

The United States has been ever bound, by faith and by sacrifice, to the cause of righteousness. Washington, under the shadow of whose monument we stand, committed our nation in its youthful world for all future time." We have never sat idly by when despots attempted by violence to snuff out that hope. Today we face a new test. I am confident that our response will be worthy of our great heritage, and that we shall not be afraid to live sacrificially and even dangerously in a righteous cause.

Father Accused Of Hurling Son, 8, Out of Window

New York, July 4 (AP).—A father was jailed today, accused of downing a few beers, then hurling his 8-year-old son out of a third-story window in a fit of temper.

The boy, Donald, was found moaning on the sidewalk last night. His left ankle was broken and doctors fear his skull may be injured. The boy's fall was broken when he hit a restaurant sign on the way down.

"He had three or four beers and then he got mad at me," the boy said of his 39-year-old father Martin Conway, a GI student at a cooks' and bakers' school.

Conway was charged with felonious assault. He denied the charge. He was held without bail for a hearing July 14.

Patterson Still Envoy In Spite of Guatemala

Gautemala City, July 4 (U.P.).—Assistant United States Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, jr., said today that Richard C. Patterson, jr., is still United States Ambassador to Gautemala and is now in Washington on a "visit of sonsultation."

The Gautemalan government has asked for Patterson's recall on the ground that he was "interfering in domestic politics."

Help Break Washington's Milk Monopoly!

READ HOW YOU CAN PROTEST BEING PUSHED AROUND BY WASHINGTON'S "MILK BARONS"

It is high time that the public learns exactly what is going on behind the scenes in the fight that the big producers are waging against the independent dairies. Here are the facts, told in full for the first time!

James J. Ward
President, EMBASSY DAIRY

● For over 20 years, Embassy Dairy and a few other "independents" have been under the constant and vicious attack of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association. I, personally, have been in the forefront of this fight from the very beginning, and I have never before called on the public for support in my efforts.

Now, however, the influences that I see as sinister and contrary to the public interest are forcing the fight into the open. Because I believe that your health, your well-being and your pocketbook are now being made a political football, I am, for the very first time, laying all the shameful facts of the case before you, and asking for your active support.

Who "Controls" District Milk?

The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association is composed of a group of farmers who market their products in Washington. This group, under the present laws, supplies Washington with 85% of all its milk!

Perhaps it is not fair to say that the Association actually "controls" the Washington milk market. However, it is highly significant that it supplies the District with 85% of its milk, and that the Association was recently under Federal indictment on a monopoly charge. The Government's suit against the Association failed, but Mr. Bruce B. Derrick, Secretary and Treasurer of the Association, was convicted.

The Facts About the Law!

The District of Columbia Milk Laws were written and enacted 25 years ago. Every effort to change these laws has met with the spirited opposition of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association.

Why?

Because these old, out-dated, antiquated laws favor the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association, and make it all but impossible for those dairies who do not care to pay their high prices, to operate here!

The Washington Daily News, in an editorial on Friday, June 23, 1950, said: "This co-op has kept local prices higher than in other eastern cities."

And the Evening Star, in its leading editorial on June 14, 1950, said: "... the public is being made the goat in this business, without the slightest justification."

How long are you going to stand for this sort of shennanigans?

Laws Regulate Farms, But Not Milk

Under the present laws, the District of Columbia's requirements for milk purity . . . or low bacteria count . . . are no more stringent than those of any of the 32 States whose laws follow the regulations of the United States Public Health Service.

So it is not a question of protection of public health.

The present District laws require all farms supplying milk to Washington to be inspected by District of Columbia veterinary inspectors.

They require every farmer to keep . . . but not necessarily to use . . . two towels for every cow in his barns.

They require the steam sterilization of all containers in which milk is shipped, a costly process which, you will read later on, is considered obsolete by present-day sanitary authorities.

They prohibit farmers to maintain "loafing barns" and milking parlors and require all cows to be harnessed in stalls when not in pasture.

They bar the use of chemical sterilization of milk containers while another set of District laws permits public restaurants to sterilize their glassware and china in this identical fashion!

These laws raise the cost of producing milk, but do not improve the standards for milk. They are strict on farms, but not on milk!

Isn't This Ridiculous?

Milk supplied to Glenn Dale Sanitarium for use by Washington's tubercular patients . . . may not be given to the criminals housed in the District Jail!

The reason for this silly ruling is that Glenn Dale Sanitarium (supported by the District government) is located in Maryland, while the Jail is in Washington!

Milk that is delivered to Walter Reed Hospital, under the present laws, may not be delivered to your home in the District of Columbia!

The District Government says, in effect: "The milk that is fine for our tuberculosis patients is not fit for the criminals in our jails" and "while a milk may be all right for patients at the No. 1 U. S. Army hospital, it's not all right for Washington residents!

Does This Make Sense?

One "independent" dairy is located in Hyattsville, a stone's throw from the District line. This dairy may deliver milk to the U.S. Navy Yard in Washington and the Naval Hospital at Bethesda under contract, but may not deliver the same milk to the homes of Navy Yard and Naval Hospital employees in the city of Washington, a hundred yards from its plant!

And to demonstrate how utterly nonsensical the District laws are, if you are a resident of Washington you may not purchase, for your coffee, the identical cream that local ice cream makers put into the ice cream that you can buy anywhere in town!

What They Are Trying to Do

Eight years ago, the District Commissioners, acting under wartime emergency powers, suspended "temporarily" the regulations requiring all farms supplying milk to Washington to meet the requirements cited above.

At the same time, the standards for milk brought into Washington were maintained.

Now, however, the District Health Commission has decreed that the old law is to be enforced again.

The result will be to force all Washington dairies to buy only from farms inspected by District of Columbia veterinarians . . . which means, in effect, only from the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association.

The "85% monopoly" which this co-op already enjoys would become complete!

The record of monopoly is that it leads inevitably to higher prices. Our milk in Washington, under an "85% monopoly," is already among the highest priced in the nation.

What would it become under a 100% monopoly?

Old Law Should Be Revised

The United States Public Health Service has on several occasions during the past 25 years revised its regulations covering milk in recognition of the tremendous strides taken in the science of sanitation.

32 of our 48 States have followed these changing United States Public Health Service regulations in order to maintain a supply of uniformly high quality milk within their borders.

For your protection as well as my own, I urge you to support adoption of the modern Milk Ordinance and Code as recommended by the U.S. Public Health Service.

Only the District of Columbia adheres to the outmoded standards of "horse-and-buggy days."

And you pay the price for this backwardness every time you buy a bottle of milk in Washington!

The Washington Times-Herald, in an editorial on Thursday, June 22, 1950, said: "Washington should have milk. It should have pure milk. But it should not limit its supply past reasonable regulation and control. Therefore, we urge complete overhauling of the law."

And the Washington Daily News (June 23, 1950) said: "If Washington's milk market is to be closed — if supply is to come only from farms inspected by local Health Department veterinarians — then this should not contribute to a monopoly of supply in the hands of a group of farmers who have squeezed the family milk bill for every penny it would yield."

THE TRUTH ABOUT STERILIZATION!

District Health Officer, Dr. Daniel Seckinger, told the District Commissioners on June 22, 1950 (as quoted in the Washington Daily News): "We have written everywhere to ask about chemical sterilization. We have been told by the U.S. Public Health Service and State Health Officers it is just as good as steam."

In a hearing before the Gillette Committee, Mr. James M. Punderson, General Manager of the Dairy Cooperative, Rochester, Minnesota, testified that steam sterilization was abandoned by his dairies 28 years ago in favor of the more modern and more effective chemical methods. During all this period, Mr. Punderson's dairies have furnished all the milk for the famous Mayo Clinic of Rochester, Minnesota, one of the leading medical centers of the world and scene of many of medicine's most dramatic and beneficial discoveries. Yet the District of Columbia milk laws do not permit local dairies to use the same type of sterilization that has kept the Mayo Clinic's milk containers pure for 28 years!

Containers in which milk is shipped to Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Richmond, Boston, Newark, Buffalo . . . into every city in the United States except Washington . . . are permitted to be sterilized chemically.

Under the present laws, use of chlorine, the chemical, is allowed for the sterilization of the apparatus and containers at the pasteurization plants inspected by District of Columbia inspectors. If this form of chemical sterilization is permitted in the plants where raw milk is processed before being delivered to your home, why should it not be permitted on the dairy farms where raw milk is produced?

The specious claim is that this is for the protection of your health. But is Washington's health record any better than that of any other large city? It is not! But Washington's milk prices are higher!

If chemical sterilization is not effective, why do District laws permit its use in public eating places?

The truth is that this is simply a smoke screen generated by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association to enable this greedy co-op to make its monopoly over Washington's milk supply complete!

What's in the Wind?

Representative A. L. Miller, of Nebraska (a great milk producing State), has introduced a bill into Congress which would open the Washington milk market to milk from any source providing such milk meets the strict standards of the U.S. Public Health Service.

Adoption of this bill to establish the U.S. Public Health Service standards here would do away with a costly duplication of inspection services which in some cases directly contradict each other.

It would clear the way for lower milk prices in the District of Columbia.

But, as the Washington Daily News warns: "... Congress may not pass this bill. It will have strong opposition."

Could it be that this opposition is being led by those Senators and Representatives who own dairy farms and are members of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association?

At any rate, you may be sure that any efforts to relax the co-op's "85% monopoly" will be fought tooth and nail, and it is reliably reported that the Association has a two million dollar "war chest" to maintain such a fight.

YOU Can Take Part in This Fight

You, as a resident of the District of Columbia, cannot vote on this question, or on any other. You have no Congressional Representatives to whom to take your complaints.

And you, as a member of the milk consuming public, have no "lobby" to look after your interests before Congress or even before the District Committee.

But there is a very positive way in which you can protest the "pushing around" that your pocketbook has received at the hands of the "85% monopoly" all these years.

WHAT YOU CAN DO!

Embassy Dairy has been fighting back against the attacks of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association for twenty years. I have led this fight single-handed.

I confess that now my back is to the wall.

You can help me to break the "85% monopoly" and its high prices by giving me your active support.

By signing and mailing the coupon below, you will be registering your protest against the strangle hold that the co-op is now attempting to tighten . . . a strangle hold that will inevitably choke your pocketbook even more than it has in the past!

By helping to break the "85% monopoly" you will be casting your protest vote for lower milk prices!

Fill Out and Mail the Coupon

I, personally, will take all coupons received to the District Commission and place them on the record as evidence of a public protest against the "85% monopoly" and the high milk prices it encourages.

With your active support, I promise to carry forward this fight for your interests to the bitter end!

For me, there is more than just milk sales at stake. During the War, Embassy Dairy received Official Commendations for Quality from the United States Army and Navy when we were supplying Camp Meade, Fort Belvoir, the Naval Bases at Norfolk, Va., and Cherry Point, N. C., Fort Jackson, S. C., and scores of other similar organizations.

I am justifiably proud of that record. And I am determined that Embassy Dairy's good name shall not be smeared or belittled by any "bully's" propaganda!

Please Act Immediately!

Like you, we are the "little fellows" in this fight. And, like you, we resent being pushed around!

Fill out, clip and mail the coupon on this page right now.

If you do not care to go to the trouble of mailing the coupon, simply telephone DUpont 1441 on any weekday between 8:30 a.m. and 6:00 p.m. and tell the operator that you are against the Monopoly of Washington's Milk Barons and for lower milk prices!

You will, by these actions, pit yourself on the side of Justice in this fight-to-the finish against a greedy, self-seeking "85% monopoly!"

Straw Man Veto

President Truman demolished a straw man, in our opinion, in his veto of the Hatch Act amendments. Among other things these amendments would have permitted Federal employes in nearby areas to participate in local partisan politics, and would have given the Civil Service Commission discretion in applying minor penalties under the Hatch Act. The President did not object to the discretionary feature, but opposed the participation of employes in partisan politics unless on a Nation-wide scale, and condemned strongly the provision requiring that Civil Service Commission records on Hatch Act violations be supplied to congressional committees as a matter of right. He did not cite what to our mind is the principal ground for criticism in the bill, namely, that it was pushed through Congress without adequate hearings.

In his objection on Civil Service records, the President referred to the statutory separation of executive and legislative powers and made it appear that this was another attempt to invade the executive files. The fact is, however, that Civil Service records on Hatch Act proceedings are matters of public record and have been available to Congress all along. This provision, while perhaps unnecessary, had nothing to do with loyalty files or the divulgence of confidential data, and the President merely weakened his case by confusing the issues.

As for participation in partisan politics, it does not follow that because this is a question of great importance in nearby areas where Federal employes constitute a large proportion of the population, this right ought to be extended everywhere. It is not an issue elsewhere; but it has a great deal to do with the kind of local government that is to be had in, for example, Maryland, where the nonpartisan movement is not strong. As a matter of fact, the effect in nearby Virginia probably will be to induce the political parties to back candidates in "nonpartisan" elections, thus defeating the purpose of the nonpartisan movement.

The President did have a point in his mention of the "party plans" which require a local candidate to support State and national candidates on the same ticket. This was a thinly veiled reference to the scheme of the Virginia Democratic machine, which exacts what is equivalent to a loyalty oath. That is certainly an objectionable provision, but the President has taken the wrong way of opposing it. If the amendments had gone through, other restrictions in the Hatch Act might well have forced the party to recede. As it is now, it is not the party chieftains, but the large number of Government employes, who are penalized.

Bent Twigs

There is no use closing our eyes to the plain fact that the American public school system is approaching a serious breakdown. The signs of it are all over the Nation, near at hand as well as far away. They have been growing and multiplying. Educators have warned of the danger repeatedly. But the signs and the warnings have been ignored, or at any rate shunted aside, by a Congress preoccupied with problems of military security. Now Willard E. Givens, executive secretary of the National Education Association, has come forward with a report that sets the situation forth in the cold statistical terms of an audit. Not less than 10 billion dollars must be spent on school construction alone, he says, if the country's educational facilities are to be equipped to carry their load. An additional 8 to 10 billion dollars must be spent annually to raise teachers' salaries and recruit new teachers.

The cost is fantastic. So is the cost of neglect. The NEA report details that for us, too. A third of a million children in public elementary schools are limited to half-day sessions. A fifth of the buildings in use in city school systems are from 50 to 80 years old. Innumerable children attend classes in corridors and basements of dilapidated, unsafe schoolhouses. Nearly 100,000 temporary or substitute teachers are filling places in the school system because of the teacher shortage, although they lack the training and qualifications for permanent appointment.

It is an absurdity to say that the country cannot afford better education for its children. Twenty years ago, according to the NEA report, we devoted 3.09 percent of the national income to education. In 1940 the percentage was 2.88. Now it is down to 1.84. It is true that the capital outlays required for belated school construction and the sharp budgetary increases needed for teachers' salaries cannot be financed at the local level. Federal aid on a major scale is imperative. To withhold it is the most profligate kind of economy. For it entails nothing less than a waste of the minds and characters of those who will one day be responsible for the security and progress of the United States.

Far East

What to do about Korea when the aggression has been defeated—and there can be no haggling about the degree of commitment till that objective has been achieved—requires a good deal of fresh thinking. Southern Korea got its pledged independence under the auspices of the United Nations. Freedom was so heady to the Koreans that the power-conscious President Dr. Syngman Rhee was insistent that the American troops should be withdrawn. He will doubtless be equally insistent on the restoration of the occupation when independence has been rewon, for there can be little doubt that if the American troops had stayed, there would have been no attack.

But it does not necessarily follow that such a reinstatement would be a good thing for America. Wise policy on the part of the United States is to refrain from intermeddling in the affairs of mainland Asia. Asia for the Asiatics—that should be made clear to Asia. It was part of the American propaganda during the war, but somehow, it got forgotten in the difficulty of making anticolonialism square with European recuperation. The result was that the Russians stole our clothes while we were wrestling with this dilemma of reconstruction. Except for Indo-China, Asia for the Asiatics is, however, the substance of the latest Truman declaration. He has put the Seventh Fleet between Chiang Kai-shek and China, and relegated Formosa to its own category. This constitutes a disavowal of intervention in China and a check on Chiang Kai-shek's effort to harass the Chinese Communists. To that extent the policy will offset in part the desperate Russian effort to widen the breach between the West and Chinese communism. Of this Muscovite maneuver there cannot be the slightest doubt, and, no matter what happens in Korea, the Russians may be successful in this respect. At any rate, Mao Tze-tung has been morally dragged into the invasion of Southern Korea.

As to Indo-China, more aid to the French-Bao Dai combine was probably thought necessary by way of asserting the status quo throughout the Far East till the Korean danger has been overcome. At least we hope that this is a correct interpretation. But when the danger is over, Indo-China should remain a secondary consideration because it is located on the mainland. So, it may be said, is Korea, but what has impelled action in Korea is something special—a naked aggression clearly originating in Moscow which if successful would destroy the American influence throughout Asia. When the aggression has been defeated, the secondary relation of Korea to the American strategy should be restored—in line with the limitation of the American interest to an offshore role.

However, a period of convalescence will be needed in Southern Korea calling for military and other help. But this should be undertaken, it seems to us, under the same auspices with which the United States went into action, viz, the United Nations. A U. N. Commission, which supervised the May 30 election, is still on the spot, and when the blow was struck, was trying to get into North Korea, seeking that unification of the country which is the only long-run solution of the Korean problem. Korea should remain an issue for the United Nations after the aggression has been rebuffed.

Thus there is no need to change our permanent policy with regard to Korea just because we have been called upon to undertake a rescue operation. The internal affairs of the Asiatic peoples on the mainland are their own affairs, and to intermeddle in them would be to lose ourselves in an unfamiliar bog, and endanger our security, which requires global watchfulness but limited responsibilities eked out with shared responsibilities with the United Nations—an agency, only a week ago in process of being written off, which nowadays is recognizably an invaluable agency in backing American policy for keeping the peace.

Court Record

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman has rung up an unprecedented record of success before the Supreme Court. In the term just completed, he appeared before the court 12 times, winning for the Government in every instance. He won 11 out of 12 appeals during the preceding term. For a beginner, he appears to be doing fairly well.

More impressive than his quantitative record, however, is the quality of his performance. Mr. Perlman has helped to bring about an historical reversal of the Supreme Court's position respecting the constitutional rights of the Negro. In the restrictive covenant cases, the equal education cases and the Henderson case, he made the Department of Justice—which is to say, the Government of the United States—an affirmative champion of those rights. This was especially noteworthy in the Henderson case because it involved support of a plaintiff's argument against a Government agency.

Mr. Perlman has had some notable victories in other fields as well. The recent decisions of the court in the Texas and Louisiana "tideland" oil cases confirm the California verdict of 1947 and give the Federal Government dominion over an incalculably rich store of submerged mineral resources. These and a number of additional issues argued before the court required of the Solicitor General a grasp of tremendously complex problems. He and his staff have thoroughly earned the warm commendation accorded them by the President.

Politics Over Pike

Little by little the picayunish reasons for the opposition to Sumner Pike for another term on the Atomic Energy Commission are coming to the surface. No one has had the candor or the courage to mention them forthrightly. But Senator Hickenlooper has intimated that his own reservations stem from the fact that Mr. Pike did not jump like a jack-in-the-box at the prospect of developing a hydrogen bomb. More power to Mr. Pike! So momentous a step needed informed exploration of all the ramifications before it was undertaken and not blind acceptance. There has been not the slightest indication that Mr. Pike has not supported the President's decision loyally and to the best of his ability.

We suspect, as a matter of fact, that the H-bomb stand and Mr. Pike's irritating tendency toward discursiveness are only superficial reasons for opposition by the cabal seeking to stymie his nomination. Mr. Pike's sin in Senator Hickenlooper's eyes is that he has spoken out frankly on the relations between the Atomic Energy Commission and the public and that he supported David Lilienthal during the latter's trial by sniping last year. It was, of course, the very vapidity of the Iowa Senator's charges, and not anything that Mr. Lilienthal or Mr. Pike did, that made Mr. Hickenlooper look silly. But the association with Mr. Lilienthal, plus the fact that he had accepted previous appointment from President Roosevelt, make Mr. Pike a New Dealer—despite the fact that he is a Maine Republican—and Mr. Hickenlooper is seeking vindication by exacting his pound of flesh.

Added to this, of course, are reports of all sorts of behind-the-scenes deals—Southern Democratic opposition to Pike in return for a negative Republican vote on Martin Hutchinson, who is anathema to Senator Byrd, for the Federal Trade Commission. Drew Pearson asserts that Senator Brewster, Mr. Pike's fellow Down-Easter, engineered this little swap. Mr. Brewster is publicly supporting Mr. Pike, but he is no doubt concerned over the stories that Mr. Pike might run against him in 1952.

What all this boils down to, of course, is that the vital position of the Atomic Energy Commission is being lost sight of in a mess of politicking. If the full Senate considers the implications of such pettiness in a time of national crisis, we cannot believe that it will go along with the negative committee report when it votes on the Pike nomination. Rejection of Mr. Pike on such mean and flimsy grounds would make incredibly more difficult the President's job of persuading a qualified man to accept the chairmanship of the Atomic Energy Commission. It would also mean that the country's biggest enterprise would be left to limp along with only 60 percent of its top leadership.

Not The Remedy

Aroused by the disclosure that the bankrupt Lustron Corp. paid Senator McCarthy $10,000 for an article on housing, Representative O'Sullivan is sponsoring a bill to fine and imprison any member of Congress accepting pay for articles or speeches. We agree that legislators who receive extravagantly large fees for spoken or written material are open to the charge of exploiting their high office for purposes of gain. Senator McCarthy cannot minimize the unethical character of his action by pointing out that other Senators have received pay for speeches. There is a wide difference between accepting a fee for a speech and taking $10,000 from a corporation that is obtaining benefits from the Government. But in any event the remedy proposed by Mr. O'Sullivan would not be practicable and would not operate in the public interest.

When there are no compromising circumstances, it is just as legitimate for legislators to accept reasonable pay for the production of books, speeches and articles as it is for them to receive remuneration for other outside activities. If members of Congress were compelled to forgo all income from outside sources, the quality of the legislative body would deteriorate, for many men of substance with established business or professional connections would be unwilling to make the sacrifices required in taking elective office for a limited and uncertain number of years. The best corrective for abuses of privilege lies in an aroused electorate to retire to private life legislators who indulge in unethical practices.

Many speeches and articles prepared by members of Congress are of unusual interest and value, reflecting the views of experienced legislators. It is both reasonable and desirable to encourage them to enlighten the public on issues of national importance by permitting them to take adequate pay for their labor. Furthermore, if legislators were to be penalized for accepting money for speeches and articles, other public officials could hardly expect to enjoy their present freedom to sell their opinions. While some legislators as well as executive officials no doubt devote too much time to these extra-official activities, the advantages of permitting them to exercise their own judgment as to where the line should be drawn are so obvious as to warrant a "hands off" policy.

WE WILL KNIT THE STARS

For B. C. G.

Stay with me tonight, dear; we will watch
The lights of fireflies move slowly
Over the fields; we will listen
To the cricket frogs in the low corners
Of the meadow, and if the wind whispers,
We will hear that too; its sighing is like
That of your breathing close to my ear.
We will make this love of ours secure
As the layers of shale pressed and sealed
For centuries by the strength of rock and earth
Above them . . . stay with me tonight, dear,
And we will knit the stars into the sun.

Politics Over Pike

The awful question that strikes the alert citizen as he studies the Pike controversy is this: Is the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, which has the power to direct the activities and policies of the Atomic Energy Commission, playing politics? Every American citizen holds a personal share in this unique company costing him many tax dollars. This entitles him to an adequate stock pile of atomic weapons and to the speedy promotion of the benefits inherent in the program. Can he afford to see the atomic program buried in the pork barrel?

Mr. Pike's Bowdoin speech of last July has been mentioned as a basis of some of the congressional criticism leveled against him. This speech, available to the public, should receive careful attention from the average man who is so vitally concerned with the way in which this program is managed. The section dealing with "Relations With Congress" probably holds the key to much of the present attempt to get rid of a troublesome individual and to replace him with a more amenable man. In this section he moderately but unmistakably describes the stultifying process, already at work, which is nullifying the original purposes of the "Atomic Energy Act of 1946."

Said Mr. Pike, whose principal contribution to the commission is in the business sphere, "In some instances it has been obvious that political considerations, which have no place in the management of an industrial operation, which in great measure characterizes large segments of the AEC's work, have been injected into congressional consideration of some of our problems."

Senator Johnson, the lone Democrat who sided with the Republicans on the Joint Committee to cast the deciding vote against Mr. Pike's confirmation, leveled the same criticism, but couched in stronger terms, against the committee as reported in The Washington Post of last October 27. Said Senator Johnson at that time "This summer, for the first time, partisan politics have cropped up in the (congressional) committee's work. Unless it stops at once, the whole committee should resign and turn these vital problems over to worthier hands." Excellent advice, Mr. Johnson. That is precisely what I, as an interested citizen, would like to see done.

Are the American people going to stand for this sneak attack upon Mr. Pike by irresponsible members of the committee? If so, they deserve to lose the great stakes in their future security and well being that have so far been preserved largely through the efforts of such men as Mr. Pike and Mr. Lilienthal.

"Peace, It's Wonderful"

Your June 30 editorial on the World Peace Appeal called it an effrontery and booby-trap. Though this attitude is familiar, it puzzles me and many others. The rest of the non-Communist world as well as the Communist sees this country in a bad light when we indiscriminately turn against such a proposal because the Communists, too, support it.

We say the peace proposal is hypocritical, that only we are interested in peace. Perhaps it is a booby-trap but we are caught rather if we do not support it.

The Stockholm petition calls for outlawry of atomic warfare, and this is said to mean greater loss to us. Can we value our superior number of bombs more than a few of theirs dropped on our great cities?

The fundamental problem for us is how to make familiar the idea that our fear and hate along with theirs prevents some sort of understanding and settlement. Certainly to oppose and poke fun at evidence of humanity's deep yearning for peace, irrespective of different beliefs as to how it can be obtained, does not contribute to our aim.

Organized Pedestrians

Pedestrians are becoming quite fed up with the announcement each year that the American Automobile Association has awarded the District a plaque for "excellence in the pedestrian protection program."

Perhaps the association would become fed up too if pedestrians were to organize in self-defense against drivers making turns failing to yield the right of way to pedestrians on cross walks when they are entitled to it.

Suppose an organization of pedestrians sought to control drivers in the manner that the association has pressured laws and regulations to control walkers. What would the association think if organized pedestrians were to succeed in securing a law reducing the speed limit and then awarding the District a plaque commending it for protecting autoists from their own follies? Morality In Congress

Of course there are many more good actors in Congress than bad actors. But the good actors are altogether too tolerant of the bad actors to escape just criticism.

It is the duty of the good actors to set and uphold a high standard of personal conduct on the part of all its members. The Constitution provides that each house shall be the judge of the qualifications of its own members; and each house has power not only to punish but to expel bad actors.

Space allows me to cite only two of many instances of bad acting that have gone unrebuked by Congress. The behavior in both cases was notorious and shockingly scandalous to minds not infected with "congressional courtesy." In either of these instances did the House (in which the bad acting occurred) manifest by word or gesture the least sign of displeasure.

I refer to the present chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee which Dr. Samuel Johnson, were he living, might be tempted to say he had in mind when he made his famous definition of patriotism) and his predecessor, now in prison, despite house complaisance. See "Merry-Go-Round" in The Washington Post of June 24, and earlier stories broadcast throughout the Nation.

Korea Under The U. N.

The United States and the United Nations have assumed a grave responsibility in the eyes of the Korean people and to the world. Their actions may bring about the total destruction of Korea in a test of East-West strength. They may even precipitate World War III. None of this is Korea's choosing or desire.

War is cruel and cold-blooded. Great catastrophe is bound to fall upon the Korean people. But if the United States is to block Communist domination, it must draw the line somewhere, and if the United Nations is to survive, it must uphold its authority in this critical hour. A price must be paid for freedom.

President Rhee blames his plight on the United States for giving "too little and too late". It is hard to understand his accusation. Last October, Dr. Rhee boasted, "I am sure that we could take Pyongyang, the northern capital, in three days." (New York Times, October 8, 1949) He complained that he was stopped from doing so only by the United States and then the United Nations, which feared that such action might start World War III.

On October 31, south Korean Defense Minister Shin Sung Mo, in Tokyo making "purely social calls" on General MacArthur and "not asking for more aid", told a press conference that his troops were ready to drive into North Korea. "If we had our own way, we would have started already . . . We are strong enough to march up and take Pyongyang within a few days." (New York Herald Tribune, November 1, 1949)

What has happened to the armed might of the southern government since then? A few weeks ago, Brig. Gen. William L. Roberts, then chief of the United States Military Advisory Group in Korea, called the caliber of the Southern army as good as that of the United States. The present military debacle, therefore, evidently is the result of poor morale, stemming from unpopularity of the Rhee regime. When morale is gone everything is gone.

In order to succeed, the United States in military operation must be supported by a democratic civil administration which can rally the people around itself. The Rhee government was discredited in the May 30 election, and is incapable of rallying popular support without force. America cannot hold the Korean people to the democratic banner with the regime because it is not democratic. Therefore, I suggest that the United Nations take over the civil administration of South Korea for the duration of the conflict and until a final solution of the Korean problem is reached.

A United Nations governing mission would be of great service to South Korea. The Koreans are fed up with repression. Since the United Nations authorized the United States to take over the responsibility for repelling invasion it should take over the government as well. No half measure will suffice.

Today's calamitous events are a direct result of the division along the thirty-eighth parallel of a racially homogeneous people and an economically integrated country. In the past I have consistently insisted that, as long as the Soviet Union and the United States support their own fledgling governments in the north and south, there can be no peaceful unification of Korea, or freedom and happiness of the people. A year ago I warned in particular that a bloody civil war was brewing and implored the two responsible powers to reach accord on the Korean problem. The present crisis is no sudden flare-up.

In the midst of today's crisis, therefore, I must reiterate the position I have taken since VJ-Day, namely, that the Korean problem will not be settled until the Korean people, both north and south, are left severely alone. The United Nations should exert all its power and use its good offices to induce the Soviet Union and the United States to come to terms on the Korean question as soon as possible. YONGJEUNG KIM.

Goosestep Antidotes

By Malvina Lindsay

Gains in Germany

SOME SAY it's the battle of the goosestep against the free coke for the soul of tomorrow's Germany. And there has been much handwringing in this country because the goosestep appeared to be winning.

The Korean coup has set Western democratic forces to checking up on their soft spots. One of these, insist those impressed by Stalin's revival of Hitler's youth technique, is in western Germany. There, they say, a great army of German manpower is coming of age unprepared in mind or mood to oppose the totalitarian threat on the East.

However, the tortoise at last seems to be gaining on the hare in the ideological race in Germany. The recent Communist youth march on Berlin, for all the headlines it got, was more of a flash-in-the-pan demonstration than was at first believed, according to reports reaching officials in the American reorientation program. And the slow basic work with youth in the American zone is beginning to show dividends that promise to be lasting.

It is now believed that a very small percentage of the half million youths who marched on Berlin represented a hard core of Communist faith. Who couldn't get up a big parade, German youth workers ask, by offering transportation to Berlin, uniforms, food, 25 marks a day spending money, flags, penants, badges, band music? Moreover, of the several thousand East zone Germans who took advantage of the festivities to escape to West Berlin were 380 of the "Free German Youth" supposed to have been in the march.

RECENTLY in this country there has been the widespread cry: Why don't we organize German youth? Why aren't we democratizing young Germans faster? Why are we letting the Communists win the future Germany with slogans, uniforms and band music? Also the criticism has been raised that we have nothing better than free cokes with which to counter the indoctrination and goosestepping—also jobs in state directed labor—that the Communists offer German youth.

Yet little is known here of what we are actually doing—largely because it isn't done in a way to make headlines. For example, in one German state alone, Hesse, with a population of about four million, 50 percent of the youth belongs to organizations. This is about a half-million—as many as marched in the Eastern zone demonstration. But unlike German Communist youth, the Hesse youth doesn't belong to one organization that gets its orders from the top. It is scattered in church, trade union, sports, nature, rural and other organizations.

The idea "You can join what you please" is impressed on German youth in the American zone. This seems to be paying off. Dr. Howard W. Oxley, chief of community activities in Hesse for the High Commissioner, here to report to the State Department on the reorientation program, says that volunteer joiners line up as fast as leaders can be supplied. And young Germans who want to train for leadership are volunteering their services faster than institutes to train them can be set up. They come to the institutes at their own expense, frequently paying substitutes to work in their jobs while they are in training.

THESE organizations, run by Germans with American encouragement, offer more than free cokes. Many of them in addition to recreational work try to help youths with their individual problems. But there is no indoctrination in the Communist manner. Democracy is taught largely in its practice through parliamentary procedure, group participation and discussion.

The chief needs of German youths today are jobs, training in skills so they can get jobs, and places at which they can meet for recreation. There is a tremendous need of musical instruments on which gifted young Germans could learn to play and rebuild the orchestras and bands of their music-loving nation. The reorientation program with its small resources cannot provide these.

Joblessness is made more acute by the large numbers of young refugees from the eastern zone. Their attitudes reveal that the authoritarian system—even with its assurance of work—is not making the appeal to the German mentality that had been expected. These refugees complain of having no choice of labor, no opportunity to develop their special skills, no sense of personal freedom in their daily living.

Moreover, the young Germans being brought to this country in the reorientation program—there will be 2690 here this year on visits ranging from 60 days to a year—show by their attitudes here and when they return that the German youth, like anyone else, given a taste of personal freedom, thereafter values it. As one so well expressed it, "Oh, yes, the Americans have their problems, but at least they're free to work them out in their own way."

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

We Know Where We Stand

W. AVERELL HARRIMAN, newly appointed special assistant to the President has returned to Washington several weeks before he was scheduled to return. And this simple fact is not without significance. For Harriman has returned to take part in the searching, wholesale reassessment of American policy which has now become the first order of business.

The simple fact is that the Kremlin-sponsored attack on Korea has knocked the basic assumption underlying American policy into a cocked hat. This assumption was that the Kremlin was not now ready, and would not be ready for some years, to risk a world war. Yet the Kremlin has now clearly and consciously risked a world war. This in turn means that Washington has been mistaken about Soviet capabilities and intentions. Thus a new and unexpected situation has arisen, and a new policy must be quickly fashioned to fit this new situation.

Harriman and the other presidential advisers who must devise the new plan of action will not find theirs an easy task. For complacency, muddling and self-delusion now make it necessary for them to start virtually from scratch.

They will find very little to build on. As far as our relations with our allies are concerned, the Atlantic powers have yet failed to agree on any realistic plan for the defense of the Atlantic community. This is for a simple reason. At The Hague meeting this spring, the Atlantic defense officials wrapped the maximum defense requirements of every participating country into a huge, ungainly bundle and called the monstrous result a "plan." At the subsequent Brussels meeting, the European finance ministers took one look at what this "plan" would cost, and threw up their hands in horror. There the matter now rests. Joint American-Eurapean defense planning is stalled at dead center.

SINCE this fiasco, the American Joint Chiefs of Staff have been assigned to make a unilateral assessment of the extent of the American contribution to the defense of western Europe. This is being done without close consultation with the Europeans, which is a nonsensical way to do business. And meanwhile the Joint Chiefs themselves, as the National Security Board chairman, Stuart Symington, has repeatedly and bitterly pointed out, have not even yet agreed to a long-range strategic plan for the United States alone.

Thus Harriman and his colleagues will find themselves groping in near-darkness. There is, to be sure, no mystery about the general outlines of what is now really required — indeed, outside the Pentagon, there is almost unanimous agreement on this point. A great effort must now be initiated, both here and in Europe, to erect a real, rather than a sham, defense for western Europe, while Far Eastern defenses are also greatly strengthened. This cannot be done unless the American effort is immediately stepped up from the current, phony, billion-dollar level to something like two or three times that sum.

At the same time, the policy of reducing American armed strength in the name of "economy," initiated by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, must be abandoned as quickly as possible, and at least the 18-billion-dollar rearmament level projected by James Forrestal before his death must be restored. Moreover, this increased effort at home and abroad must be initiated here and now, with an appeal for added appropriations to this session of Congress. Yet before this can be done, plans for where, and how, and for what purpose, the money is to be spent must certainly be agreed upon.

ALL THIS should be obvious to any sensible man—after all, since the attack on Korea, we at least know where we stand. Yet there are a number of obstacles to rational action. In the first place, the fact that overt aggression took place in the Far East will strengthen the hands of both the congressional and military isolationists. Even from the beginning of the last war, the congressional isolationists have insanely insisted on concentrating on Asia and letting Europe go down the drain. A similar sentiment exists in certain quarters in the Pentagon, and the fact that fighting is actually going on in Asia will strengthen it.

Yet the most obvious complication is the simple fact that an effective American military and strategic policy will require a total, public, and embarrassing reversal by Secretary Johnson. The role of "the great economizer" is hardly appropriate to the present situation. Yet the simple act of sloughing off this role will constitute a public admission that Johnson has been wrong, perhaps disastrously wrong, ever since he took office. Johnson is not eager to make this public admission. The new military planning which the changed situation so urgently requires is the responsibility of the Defense Department and the Joint Chiefs. And Johnson is Secretary of Defense and boss of the Joint Chiefs.

This is the greatest single obstacle to a rational response to the situation in which we now find ourselves. Yet President Truman has now courageously called the Kremlin's bluff. As an old poker player, Truman must be fully aware that it is not much use calling bluffs if you have only a pair of treys in your hand. And although Johnson is the boss of the Joint Chiefs, Truman is the boss of Johnson.

Asia Problems

By Marquis Childs

After Korea, Indo-China?

THE MORAL pointed up by South Korea and what is happening there today is one we dare not ignore. To ignore it is to make almost certain there will be other South Koreas in Asia which can be defended in the showdown only by American planes, ships and troops.

Childs

The United States failed to make South Korea ready either militarily, economically or morally to resist the Communist invasion. Two basic reasons for this failure come to mind at once.

First is the lack of capable American personnel who could move into South Korea following the American military occupation. There just simply weren't enough Americans with a knowledge of the language, the political background and the nature of the problem.

Second, and in a way more serious, is the basic American attitude toward Asian peoples emerging from colonialism and feudalism. We want to help them achieve their aspirations for nationhood which is all well and good. But the trouble is that we assume they can achieve independence and self-government overnight.

We have been assuming that they could arrive in a year or two at the kind of parliamentary democracy that has evolved in the West over 150 years or more. And we deceived ourselves that this could be done in the chaos and confusion left behind in the Pacific at the end of World War II. It was like throwing a baby into a heavy sea and expecting him to strike out with a strong crawl stroke for a safe shore.

THE NEW governments of Southeast Asia need water wings and an instructor to tell them firmly and clearly how to use them. In other words, not merely assistance, but tactful, yet authoritative direction in how to use that assistance is essential.

All this points directly to what is perhaps the most difficult assignment the United States has undertaken in Southeast Asia. That is to try to hold the line against the Communist-led rebels in Indo - China. President Truman in his dramatic announcement of last week included speeded up military aid to Indo-China as one of the steps in the all-out policy against communism in Asia.

Indo-China illustrates to an even greater degree than South Korea the peril of a feeble and uncertain regime faced with determined hostility. The French, who held Indo-China as a colonial possession before World War II, are backing the government of Bao Dai.

Emperor Bao Dai is said to have considerable shrewdness and capacity. But the French have gone only part way with him, withholding many of the symbols of power and the resources of authority. With an army of 150,000 of their best troops, the French have had all they could do to keep Bao Dai in power against constant attack and sabotage from the underground forces of Ho Chi-Minh.

Now, in spite of strong French persuasion to stay on the job, Bao Dai has gone to France for a Riviera holiday. He has joined his wife and children whom he has consistently refused to take out to Indo-China.

THE NEWSPAPERS in Paris, including anti-Communist papers, have recently been headlining alleged scandals in Indo-China. A gambling casino in Saigon is said to be the center of a black market traffic in gold. The proprietor of this large scale operation is reported to be paying Ho Chi-Minh a generous daily bribe so the place will not be bombed.

If even half these reports are true, a situation exists that cannot long be sustained without the commitment of much greater forces than the French now have in Indo-China. And quite clearly the Indo-China baby has been put into our lap just as the British turned over the Greek problem child in 1946.

Will American troops be called on for Indo-China, too? Plainly that kind of commitment cannot be extended indefinitely. Quite apart from any other considerations, there just aren't enough trained American troops to go around.

The President in announcing the speed-up of aid to Indo-China said a military mission would be sent there. But a prime prerequisite for either economic or military assistance is American authority to bring about certain essential changes within the regime. Responsibility without authority is intolerable.

An American military mission of several hundred men, most of them officers, was in South Korea. But wherever the final blame for South Korea's unreadiness rests, we have seen plainly that a mission in and of itself is of little avail.

Ship Loaders Face Security Ban by Army

Seattle, July 4 (AP).—The Army today moved to bar an unspecified number of longshoremen from further work at the Seattle port of embarkation because of "security reasons."

Maj. Robert B. Ekvall, SPOE public information officer, said that, effective today, only longshoremen with Navy work permits would be admitted to the port.

The action is in line with the Navy, which began denying permits to some Seattle longshoremen a year ago.

Ekvall said there are approximately 1500 longshoremen in Seattle and a total of 180 have been denied passes. The Army has asked the Navy to rescreen those dock workers who do not have passes.

William Gettings, regional CIO longshore director, said the "action was useless." He said:

He said:

"Those passes are no security. A real saboteur could easily forge a pass and spend two days in there (the port) and no one would know anything about it."

The longshoremen are members of the CIO International Longshoremen Warehousemen's Union. It is one of several unions facing expulsion from the CIO on allegations of following Communist Party lines.

Paratroop Veterans Commend U. S. Course

Philadelphia, July 4 (U.P.).—The fourth annual reunion of the 82d Airborne Division today unanimously commended President Truman "for his commitment of armed forces to the conflict" in Korea.

More than 700 glider and paratrooper veterans, including three present and former commanding generals of the division, attended the three-day meeting, which ended today. The 82d comprises members of one of the Nation's most decorated World War II units.

The reunion also resolved that "similar armed aggression anywhere in the world must be met with force, that our world may perpetuate the memory of our lost but not forgotten comrades . . ."

Security Regulations Ordered for Capitol

Security regulations such as prevailed during World War II were ordered to go into effect today in the halls of Congress on Capitol Hill.

Passes will be required of all persons—including members of Congress, Capitol employees and accredited newsmen—entering or leaving the building between 4:30 p. m. and 9 a. m., except when Congress is in night session.

A-Bomb Shelters In Ozarks Promoted

Rogers, Ark., July 4 (U.P.).—James Overbeck of Hot Springs heads a group filing article of incorporation here for Colonies of the Ozarks, Inc., which is planning construction of a number of atomic-bomb-proof shelters.

Overbeck proposes a series of mountain retreats close to a number of caves. Each colony would have 50 residents housed in 24 buildings constructed of pumicestone, which Overbeck says cannot be penetrated by radioactivity.

The colonists would move into the caves in event of an atomic attack.

Overbeck said he would charge residents of the colonies about $2000 a year, food included.

Norway May Provide Some Merchant Ships

Oslo, July 4 (AP).—Norway today decided to help South Korea and hinted she may place merchant ships at the disposal of the United Nations. A Foreign Office statement announcing the decision said discussions will be held on what aid can be given, and added, "In this connection Norway has pointed to the possibility of employing Norwegian ships."

trict attorney. With 40 precincts Jarman had 2533 votes and Berry 2170.

The Thomas-Monroney scrap had held national interest largely because of Thomas' chairmanship of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

If neither wins a majority of votes cast in the seven-man race a July 25 run-off race will be necessary.

Prime issues in the Senate race have been farm price supports and public power policies. Both candidates have bid strongly for support of the farm vote.

In the public power arguments, Monroney has accused Thomas of blocking a number of rural electrification projects. Thomas contends he is an original supporter of the REA.

Thomas told the farmers that Monroney supported parity support prices of 60 percent but Monroney campaigned for 90 percent parity. House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Texas) and Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.) entered the campaign on Monroney's behalf in the closing days. Rayburn said the 60 percent parity pertained only to potatoes.

Seven o fthe State's eight Congressmen are seeking reelection, Monroney being the exception. All are Democrats.

Representative Carl Albert, Third District, and Representative George Howard Wilson, Eighth, drew no primary opposition.

Representative Dixie Gilmer, First District, has remained in a naval hospital throughout the cmapaign with friends handling his race. Opposing him is Wesley V. Disney, 30-year-old son of former Congressman Wesley E. Disney.

Two young war veterans, John Jarman and William A. Berry, both of Oklahoma City, are top contenders for Monroney's post. The district includes Oklahoma City.

With him was Col. Henry Barbert of general headquarters engineers.

The American engineers had instructed the South Korean troops how to blow up bridges to hinder the Communist North Korean columns. Three bridges had been destroyed during the afternoon and a fourth was slated for destruction at night.

I saw bombs drop on a front-line city and black columns of smoke arise.

Four North Korean Yak fighters dived at a target near us. We were luckly we escaped unhurt.

Sometimes the planes overhead were friendly, American planes of several types.

We picked up one abandoned vehicle and succeeded in making it go for a short distance. But it konked out and we towed it most of the way.

A wounded man lay moaning by the road, his ox and cart not far away in a rice paddy field. Nobody paid any attention to him until we stopped. He had wounds in the head, back, shoulder and body.

We stopped a Korean Red Cross ambulance in the line of retreating traffic and put the man aboard. Then we released his ox from the cart to give it a chance for freedom and food.

At one point was the ruins of a railroad station where planes had strafed an ammunition train, blowing it to bits.

Among the men who escaped injury when pieces of the train fell at their feet was United States Army Pvt. Bruce France, son of a dairy farmer at Soldier's Grove, Wis.

France said his mother did not worry about him as she did when he was an infantryman in World War II. Now he's in the artillery and far to the rear—theoretically.

Another man who escaped injury when the train blew up was Eugene Tanner, son of W. H. Tanner of Somerset, Ky.

In a Korean village I saw a can of vegetable soup, apparently part of a gift package from America, for it had this label:

"Jeanette Kazaal, first grade, Immaculate Heart Academy, Tucson, Ariz."

We came across American GIs scrounging for food for their mess.

Cpl. Bob Simpson, 21, son of Mrs. Mary Rogers of Princeton, Ky., said he had captured 15 pigs.

A half-dozen chickens were brought in by Pfc. Donald Fritsch, who is 21 today, and Pfc. James H. Kobayashi, 27. Fritsch's father, J. B. Fritsch, lives at Woodlawn, Ohio, and Kobayashi is the brother

We saw several battalions of completely uniformed South Korean troop trainees all carrying rifles that used to belong to the Japanese army. But the rifles all were minus their vital bolts.

Nearly every type of Korean vehicle was on the road, camouflaged with green boughs and yet clearly and proudly displaying the South Korean Republic flag.

Sometimes trains on a nearby track stopped to pick up military stragglers and refugees, then proceeded slowly south, their rooftops crowded with sivilians, and soldiers packed within the cars.

We picked up one wounded Korean and brought him back with us. He was Lieut. Song Chang Soo, 21, of the infantry. He said he had lived near the Thity-eighth Parallel, the line that separated South Korea from the North Korean Communists before the Reds invaded the South June 25.

The young lieutentn said his parents had been killed. He expected to receive hospital treatment and then return to the front.

We bucked a tide of military vehicles driven by frantic South Korean reserve troops.

MacArthur Seen as Head Of U. N. Army

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Reporter

Gen. Douglas MacArthur probably will be named United Nations commander for the Korean police action in a few days, and the forces under him will be given the right to fly the United Nations flag.

Diplomats yesterday said those two steps are included in a formula being considered here as a means of solving the Korean command problems.

The problems arise from the fact that the United Nations has never been able to form police forces of its own and must now rely in Korea on forces sent in by member nations under last week's Security Council resolution.

Canadian Ambassador Hume Wrong discussed the problem yesterday with Assistant Secretary of State John D. Hickerson. Later it was indicated that some action in the form of a resolution might be taken by the Security Council in New York "after full discussions" with delegates of other nations.

According to the formula being developed here, the Security Council will be asked to adopt a resolution providing:

1. A clear connection between the United Nations and General MacArthur, the American commander in the Far East, who in actual fact is directing the Korean fighting against the Communist invaders from the north.

2. The right of troops fighting under MacArthur to fly the United Nations flag in addition to their various national flags. The U. N. flag is light blue, with a white polar map of the world embraced in twin olive branches.

Adoption of the resolution is predicted by diplomats. They say that all the governments cooperating against the Korean Communists have favored the appointmen of MacArthur as United Nations military chief but legal and constitutional problems in the way of such action have delayed it.

The U. N. Charter authorized the formation of an international police force to which each nation would contribute troops by special treaty with the Security Council. Because of the East-West split, the Security Council has never negotiated such tratties and the U. N. police force remained a paper possibility until the Korean situation developed.

In this case the Security Council simply called on member nations to assist in repelling the Red thrust into South Korea and American forces went into the fighting on that legal ground. Other countries, such as Britain, have committed their forces to MacArthur's command. But while all this was done in the name of the United Nations, there has so far been no arrangement by which the symbol of the U. N., its flag, could be shown by the fighters.

The Gallup Poll

U. S. Public Believes Russia Is Determined to Rule World

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 4.—While the timing of the actual blow in Korea came as a surprise to Washington, no Communist-inspired aggression anywhere in the world is much of a surprise to the American public.

For at least four years the average American has diagnosed Russian intentions in one simple phrase: "out to rule the world."

The majority voiced this belief as early as June, 1946—when the guns of World War II had been silent for only nine months. The belief grew as the years went by and the "cold war" became hotter.

A year before the Korean crisis, only one person in five in the United States believed that the Russian government sincerely desired peace, despite the "peace line" in Communist propaganda.

The growth of public mistrust of Russia is highlighted in the following table, based on four surveys by the Institute in the four-year period 1946-1950. The peak of mistrust came early in 1948 after the fall of Czechoslovakia:

"As you hear and read about Russia these days, do you believe Russia is trying to build herself up to be THE ruling power of the world—or is Russia just building up protection against being attacked in another war?"

	Ruling Power	Protection	No Opin
June, 1946	58%	29%	13%
*Mar., 1948	77	12	11
May, 1949	66	15	19
Jan., 1950	70	18	12

(*After the fall of Czechoslovakia)

When voters were asked whether they believe the Russian government sincerely wants peace, 22 percent a year ago said "yes," while 60 percent said no" and the rest had no opinion.

The mistrust of Russia has dominated American thinking on many foreign and domestic policy problems. For example:

Outlawing the Communist Party in the United States has for several years been favored by a substantial majority of Americans, the last vote being more than 4-to-1 for this step, with an even larger majority in favor of requiring all members of the American Communist Party to register with the Department of Justice.

Recognition of Red China has been persistently opposed by the public. The vote among those who have followed the China situation stood greater than 2-to-1 against recognition in June of this year.

Public apprehension of another war has been rising in recent months—57 percent in a May survey said they thought another war likely within five years—and as early as April the public voted overwhelmingly for an increase in American spending for national defense.

Congressional delay in extending the selective service draft was not in line with majority sentiment throughout the country as registered in surveys. Extension of the draft was favored by 57 percent of all persons questioned in a survey five months ago, while 33 percent were opposed and 10 percent undecided.

While Russo-American relations deteriorated rapidly after 1946, actually the American public had grave reservations about Russia even in the early days of the war when the Russian-American war alliance against Hitler was first taking shape.

The Defense Department yesterday reported the wounding of two American Army officers "in action in Korea."

The casualty list did not give the exact place or circumstance of the action. The dates for the wounding of the men were the same, June 30. Both were wounded "slightly," the announcement said.

The men are:

Maj. George Blanchard, brother of John Pupshock, Shamokin, Pa.

First Lieut. Gordon D. Lohr, formerly of Sanish, N. Dak., whose wife is in Japan.

12 Solvay Officials Held on Sabotage Charges by Reds

Berlin, July 4 (AP).—At least 12 officials of the Solvay chemical plant in the Russian zone of Germany have been arrested on charges of economic sabotage, it was learned today.

West Berlin representatives of the company said several other leading officials had escaped to West Germany.

The East German government said yesterday it was preparing an "economic sabotage trial" against Solvay officials. It charged them with conspiring to prevent nationalization of the company because "99.3 percent of its assets are foreign owned."

Solvay was part of the prewar I. G. Farben chemical trust.

One on the Aisle—

Allegory Threads An Alpine Climb

By Richard L. Coe

"THE WHITE TOWER," at Keith's, is probably the closest most of us will ever come to climbing Mont Blanc. Eye-filling and stimulating, it will engross you all the way through.

Filmed in the French Alps and in Technicolor, the picture is adapted from a popular novel by James Ramsey Ullman, which I did not read. In its passage to one of the untouched peaks of Mont Blanc, it attempts something of an allegory and to explain man's longing to climb mountains.

This turns it into a sizable dish, but despite some obviously crude profundities, I'm willing to go along with it. That's a personal matter and you may not agree, but to me mountain-climbing seems far more desirable than, say, auto-racing or even golfing. This personal taste is succinctly stated by one of the characters as his reason for attempting the climb: "It's there."

In its views of six people clambering, clutching, clawing their way up stone and snow, "The White Tower" is at its exciting best. Vicariously, you are with them, and Director Ted Tetzlaff has used his cameras with one eye for excitement, the other for beauty.

The story begins well, though. In an effort to keep up a pace and an allegory, the characters lose their initial freshness.

Valli has come back to the mountain to scale the peak on which her father was lost on their joint try before the war. Oscar Homolka is the wise guide who doubts that he'll be able to get enough of the necessary party for her gamble. Cedric Hardwicke is an aging geologist who's willing to try. Claude Rains is a writer whose dreams and whose wife are always out of his grasp, though a brandy flask isn't. Lloyd Bridges is a postwar Nazi, still determined about the superman theory. Glenn Ford is a quiet American visitor, who doesn't see any point to the expedition but, at the last minute, goes along anyway.

"THE WHITE TOWER." RKO-Radio release produced by Sid Rogell. Screen play by Paul Jarrico from the novel by James Ramsey Ullman. Photographed in Technicolor in the French Alps by Ray Rennahan and Tony Braun. Music by Roy Webb. Directed by Ted Tetzlaff. At Keith's.

As the experienced Valli and the guide see it, teamwork is vital to success. The age of the geologist saves him and the brandy of the writer destroys him. By striking out for himself against teamwork and in his overwhelming belief in himself, the Nazi is destroyed. The under-prepared American also tries to go it alone in a spirit of revenge against the Nazi, and he fails. The girl and the guide, within sight of their goal, sacrifice their chance to save the eyesight of the American. The last shot shows the Yank and the girl on their way to be married.

Perhaps Mr. Ullman's leisurely prose handled it more convincingly, but it seems to me as it is in the picture that the romantic motif and the Nazi's final destruction are too pat.

The Spirit of the Sport

Another flaw, not necessarily in the story but rising from the picture's striving for pace, is a casualness of preparation. Members of the Groupe de Haute Montague, that stern order of European mountain-climbers, could never take the American's lack of snow glasses seriously. He didn't bring any; the geologist leaves him his and they break; in the vicinity of the mer de glace, so fundamental a carelessness is hard to credit.

But if "The White Tower" glosses over the seriousness of such true mountain-climbers as the girl, the guide and the Nazi, it does so in the spirit of the romantic aspect of a stern sport. For there is a lot of the spirit in mountain-climbing—the longing to evade a constantly disappointing world, the striving to conquer something concrete and natural, the soaring sense of the human against the universe.

And for all the actorish moments and pat analogies, this spirit of romantic adventure purely for the sake of itself makes "The White Tower" a picture to see.

GOOD NEWS: "Lost in the Stars" has been booked into the Gayety for the week of December 18 . . . This is important on several counts . . . Pension Bids Cause Third Of Walkouts

By the United Press

Strikes cost the Nation 15,100,000 man-days of work during the first three months of this year, with one-third of the walkouts caused by pension and welfare demands.

A Labor Department report on 656 work stoppages begun during the period emphasized the increasing importance of pension issues in union bargaining.

Only 15.3 percent of all strikes begun during the first quarter involved wage issues alone, the department said. Besides pension strikes, 13.5 percent stemmed from job security disputes and others involved relatively minor issues, the department reported.

The 656 new strikes—in addition to the continuing work stoppage by John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers, begun in 1949—resulted in the loss of 15,100,000 man-days of work. A man-day of work means the work one man normally does in one day.

Wage and pension-insurance strikes caused a loss of 14,200,000 man-days.

Altogether, 293,000 workers were involved in new strikes during January, February and March, the department said. Counting coal and other strikes continued from 1949, a total of 770 walkouts involving 718,000 workers were in progress during the three-month period.

Newest U. S. 'Dream Man' Roughs 'Em Up

Hollywood, July 4 (U.P.).—The newest "dream man" of American women today is Armand Tanny, the cave-man type, who "roughs up" his girl when she needs discipline.

Twelve hundred women screamed approval last night when Tanny, 28-year-old, 200-pound muscleman, was chosen "Mr. U. S. A."

Tanny is 5-feet-10, has a 51-inch chest, 17½-inch biceps and 17½-inch neck. He has been a professional wrestler and weight lifter and is a swimming stunt man for the movies.

He's single, but has a girl. He says he roughs her up when she gives him trouble.

A 19-year-old blonde, Evelyn Lovequist, won the "Miss U. S. A. title." Her vital statistics: 5-feet-5, 120 pounds, 36-inch bust, 25-inch waist, 36-inch hips.

Fuchs' Return To Atomic Work Hinted

London, July 4 (A.P.).—Speculation cropped up in some informed quarters today that Britain may soon put atom spy Klaus Fuchs to work again on atomic research.

There was no official confirmation or denial of the reports. The press department of the Home Office, which is responsible for Fuchs and other prisoners, said it was not given informaton about such matters.

Fuchs, one of the government's key atom scentists, was sentenced to 14 years in prison last March for tipping Anglo-American atomic secrets to Russia. In his confession, the ex-Communist said he was repentant and wanted to make amends.

There was speculation at the time that ultimately he might be allowed to resume research behind prison walls.

George Marton-Smith, a reporter for the mass-circulation Daily Mirror, today wrote that the German-born physicist may be put to work again soon. He said he learned this "on the highst authority."

One of Britain's leading atom scientists was asked to comment on the story. The scientist, who asked not to be quoted directly, said he had no "hard, independent information," but it seemed to him to be reasonable speculation.

Marton-Smith said Fuchs would be subjected to the most rigid surveillance if he resumed work. He said scientists felt that with due safeguards his knowledge and ability were too valuable to be wasted. Fuchs' work in prison has been to make mail bags.

Radio Believed Far From 'Dead'

New York, July 4 (U.P.).—The obituary notices that have been written for radio broadcasting as television grows are considerably premature, in the opinion of Richard S. Testut, whose Muzak Corp. has stakes in both mediums.

"It is my belief that television will prove to be radio's best friend," Testut, a vice president of Muzak, said. "I'll even forecast right now that in 10 years radio will be bigger than ever, and, of course, television will be bigger, too."

Testut bases his belief on surveys and intimate contact with the situation as general manager of Muzak's radio and television division.

"Television is and will be for what I call the 'relaxing period,'" Testut said. "Generally speaking, that is the evening. Only then can the majority of people take time to sit down and contribute the attention that television demands.

"Except on trains, planes or buses, with which only a small percentage of the population is involved daily, television is for a stationary audience. For safety reasons, they dare not allow television sets in automobiles.

"In this connection, I'd like to point out that there are now more than 10 million radio sets in private cars. That's a big market that TV can't invade.

"There are more than 70 million radio sets in this country's homes. Forty million of those are turned on by housewives during the day while they are engaged in their housework. A woman can't be bounding around the house doing her work and still enjoy video. But that doesn't interfere with her radio listening.

"Television encourages people to stay home. How can that be bad for radio? The TV home will be a radio home, too, and, at least after the initial novelty of TV has worn off.

"There will be radio programs that some family members will prefer to what is on television at any particular time. This competition for audience also will sharpen the program quality of both mediums.

West Berlin to Seek Bonn Republic Entry

Berlin, July 4 (AP).—West Berlin abandoned all hope today of restoring the city's unity and turned to measures for winning admission to the West German republic.

The West Berlin Assembly ordered a committee to begin drafting a new constitution, using West Germany's as a model. The new constitution would transform West Berlin's administration to that of a state—a necessary preliminary for incorporation of the area in the Bonn republic.

After the expected approval of the document by the United States, British and French commandants, West Berliners will hold an election at the end of the year. West Berlin leaders say they are convinced the Western powers ultimately will consent to designation of West Berlin as West Germany's 12th state, though 100 miles of Soviet-occupied territory separate it from the republic.

Chairman Otto Suhr told the West Berlin Assembly the Russians had shattered efforts to hold a free election in all sectors of the divided city. A Communist-controlled regime rules East Berlin. Soviet officials have repeatedly demanded the withdrawal of foreign troops as a condition for letting Berliners merge their two rival governments.

West Berlin is dependent on the Republic's charity. Its new budget, now before the Assembly, calls for expenditures of 1,575,000,000 West marks ($374,850,000), but revenues are so low it is estimated there will be a deficit of 655,000,000 West marks ($155,890,000). The city has asked the republic to meet all this deficit.

Steel Plan Moving

New French, German Idea To Pool Farms

Paris, July 4 (AP).—French and German farm leaders proposed today that the two countries pool their agricultural products along the lines of the Schuman plan for coal and steel.

This extension of the original plan for a limited degree of economic unity was made as delegates of six Western European nations began drafting details of the revolutionary treaty to pool coal and steel production under a supranational authority.

The six countries—France, Western Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg—have agreed on principles for such union. They set up five working committees today to hammer out the details.

These committees will work in strictest secrecy. None of their decisions will be made public until they are ready to report to a general plenary session.

The new agricultural plan, drawn up by officers and experts from the farm organizations of France and Germany, will be presented to government officials of the two countries.

No government representatives were present at the farm leaders' two-day meetings, just concluded.

Lightning Kills Three

Hamden, Conn., July 4 (U.P.).—Three picnickers were killed instantly today and seven others were hurt, one seriously, when lightning struck a tree under which they were eating.

Reds Shut Off Water For 50,000 in U. S. Zone

Berlin, July 4 (U.P.).—Fifty thousand persons in a thickly populated residential area of the American zone were without water today because of a Russian shutdown of water and electric power.

Housewives carrying buckets and dishpans lined up at fire hydrants in the low-lying sections of the Neukoelln district to get water.

Fire Chief Ludwig Wissel said he had had pumps installed on the banks of canals in the district, which borders on the Russian zone, as an "extraordinary precaution" in case of fire.

"This is worse than the New York water shortage last winter," a water official said. "In New York, rationing was voluntary. In Neukoelln, we don't even have it to ration."

Russian sector officials cut off electricity and water to western Berlin after Western authorities refused to pay more for public utilities, confident they could supply their part of the city from their own power and water plants.

Scottish Miners Strike

London, July 4 (U.P.).—A strike by 10,244 miners today halted production in 43 coal mines in Scotland. They are demanding a 28-cents-a-shift bonus for lower-paid workers.

Business Outlook

Russian Power To Wage War Proves Puzzling To Appraise

By J. A. Livingston

NOBODY OUTSIDE, and few persons inside, the Iron Curtain know how strong—or weak—Soviet Russia is. Nevertheless, the Korean conflict, now in full progress, may lend support—and circumstantial evidence—to the contention of many United States economists that Soviet Russia is too impoverished for war. (This view, incidentally, prevails in official Washington.)

Livingston

The analysis runs something like this: Perhaps the powerful Red Army could blitzkrieg through Europe—a highly speculative assumption. But then Russia would have to stave off an assault by the United States. And Russia could not match America in industrial stamina. Therefore, the argument goes on, the Russian game is to nibble, to probe, but never to commit itself to all-out war, because it couldn't win. Not yet anyway.

Statistics to support this argument are elusive. Soviet information is designed as much to mislead as to reveal. Yet economic statisticians, sifting Russian data much as a detective sifts criminal evidence, have been able to piece together "educated guesses" from speeches, Pravda or Red Star articles, government orders on production, reports on the progress of five-year plans, and so on.

ONE SUCH analyst is Karl Scholz, professor of economics at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. He has "detectived up" a comparison of Russian economic power versus U. S. economic power. Economists of the Department of Commerce have arrived at similar results.

If we can rely on economics alone, if economic strength dictates military decisions, then the assumption that Russia will sit the Korean war out seems reasonable. That, incidentally, is Scholz's personal view.

There are three key figures. First, the population of Soviet Russia is 25 percent greater than ours—200 million to 150 million. That implies more Russian manpower for war. But it also means more bellies to fill. That leads to the second key statistic: Russian grain production, the principal source of food, is estimated by Scholz at 125 million metric tons annually. The United States turns out about 142 million tons. Yet wheat represents only a modest portion of our food supply.

Inference: The Russians have to subsist on a much poorer diet, quantitatively and qualitatively, than we. That casts doubt on Russia's capacity to maintain its man-and woman-power through a long-drawn-out war. In the war with Germany, when Germany was fighting on two fronts, Russia depended on lend-lease shipments of food.

THE THIRD KEY figure is steel—the essential ingredient of modern war, used as it is for tanks, guns, airplanes, ammunition, motor vehicles, etc. Scholz estimates that Russia's capacity is only 30 percent of ours. This "guesstimate" is supported by Steel magazine, which placed Russian steel ingot production in 1949 at 23 million tons versus our 78 million tons. (And we had a six-week steel strike in '49!)

Straight down the line, United States industrial prowess dwarfs Russia's, if the "statistical detectives" are anywhere near right, viz.: United States coal capacity is twice the Russian; petroleum output ten times; cement four times; copper three times; automobile and truck output 20 times; tractors five times. The estimates are borne out by experience. In the last war, the United States motorized the Red army for its final assault on Germany.

But always, the big question is: Do we really know Russia's industrial capacity? Is it possible that mighty industries may have been built beyond the Urals, perhaps with captured German engineers and scientists and slave labor, of which we know little? Can Russia possibly have stored up such an immense quantity of war material that she would be able to stand off America for a long time, so that if the Red army overran Europe there'd be time to convert German French, and Belgian factories to production of Russian war materiel?

THUS, THOUGH we can guess at Russian power, we can't really know it. Therefore, we have to Joe Stalin's strength by his deeds. So long as he tests and probes, using satellites to do the fighting for him, we can assume he's not ready for war. His actions would support the statistics. And if he sits the Korean war out, we can chalk up a check mark for the statistical detectives. We can assume they're right in saying Russia's not ready for war.

But we cannot relax. The rulers of the Kremlin are investing a high proportion of Russian energy and resources in a military machine—about 20 percent of the national income—as compared with our 10 percent, at most. Would Stalin be making such a heavy commitment—which necessarily reduces the already low standard of living of the Russian people—if his intentions were strictly peaceful? To that question, there's no answer except readiness.

Lightning Kills Three Picnickers, Injures Seven

Hamden, Conn., July 4 (NYHT). Three celebrants at a festive Independence Day family picnic were killed, and seven others were injured, one seriously, when a bolt of lightning struck a front-yard maple tree and leaped down an old tethering chain into the midst of the picnickers.

The victims, seven of them in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Dorman of the rural West Hills section of Hamden, were just sitting down to an outdoor table under the maple when the bolt struck. It was the last lightning stroke of a mild storm that passed over about 2 p.m. No rain fell up to the time the bolt hit.

Killed were Miss Arthurina Dorman, 16, and her brother, Otis, 22; and Miss Betty Lyons, 18, a school chum and guest of Miss Lilian Dorman, 18.

Yo, Ho and Barrel Of English Beer For 16 U. S. Gobs

Easthourne, England, July 4 (U.P.). Sixteen United States sailors celebrated Independence Day in a brewery cellar today and they guzzled 90 quarts of free beer before yelling "uncle."

Sixteen others who had expected to join the endurance contest were the saddest men in the United States Navy. Rough seas kept them aboard their vessel, the destroyer Hawkins.

The lucky 16, chosen by lot, landed from the ship earlier. They rushed to the cellar and a freshly opened barrel of beer. Asked why they quit with the barrel still half full, 6-foot Quartermaster Ken Smalley from Michigan explained:

"It's a lot stronger than we get back home."

Asia Unionism To Be Spurred By Federation

The invasion of South Korea by Northern Communists has made the development of strong democratic trade unions in Asia more important than ever, the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions said yesterday.

Both the AFL and CIO are members of the ICFTU, created a year ago, and are sending delegates to the Far East to work with labor organizations there in promotion unionism.

The CIO will be represented by John Brophy, director of the CIO Industrial Union Councils. The AFL's delegate is Gordon Chapman, secretary-treasurer of the AFL State, County and Municipal Employes Union.

With members from three other nations, the special mission will leave Brussels Wednesday to visit 14 nations throughout Asia.

The ICFTU announced through the CIO that it had no desire "to impose on Asian trade unions the forms and methods of organization alien to their national traditions."

"All discussions and inquiries will be conducted in closest collaboration with the national movements of the various countries which the delegation will visit," the world-wide organization said.

"In this way, the ICFTU delegation is confident it can further develop all practical proposals for fully enlisting the tremendous potential strength of the democratic Asian labor movement in the international struggle for peace, freedom and social justice."

The mission will be gone two months and will visit eastern and western Pakistan, India, Japan, Formosa, Burma, Thailand, Indo-China, Hongkong, the Philippines, Indonesia, Singapore, Malaya, Ceylon and Iran.

Among other things, the mission will study "the possibilities of establishing residential and other colleges in Asia for training union leaders."

Red Envoy Turns Up At Douglas Party

London, July 4 (U.P.).—George Nikolaevitch Zaroubin, Russian Ambassador to Britain who was linked with the smashed Canadian atom spy ring, turned up today at a party given by United States Ambassador Lewis Douglas.

Also present among the 3000 guests at the Ambassador's residence was South Korean Ambassador Tehi Chang Yun. The two did not speak.

Joint Talks Held in Strike Of Switchmen

Chicago, July 4 (AP).—Government mediators got representatives of the railroads and the striking AFL Switchmen's Union together for joint peace talks today.

The conferences marked the first time the disputants have met since 4000 switchmen walked out on five Western and Midwestern lines June 25. One source close to the negotiations said the conferences merely are exploratory.

The conferences were arranged by the National Mediation Board. This board has been trying without success to find some compromise that would end this walkout and prevent a possible Nation-wide strike by three other rail unions after July 15.

These unions are protesting a ruling of a presidential fact-finding board. The board rejected their demand for a 40-hour work week at 48 hours' pay. The board agreed to the shorter work week, but at a pay boost of only 18 cents an hour.

The other unions are the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the Order of Railway Conductors and the AFL Yardmasters of North America.

Canada to Send New Minister To Yugoslavia

OTTAWA, July 4 (U.P.).—Canada will give Yugoslavia a diplomatic pat on the back for breaking with the Kremlin by naming a new minister to Marshal Tito's government, an External Affairs Department spokesman said today.

"Yugoslavia now seems to be more on our side of the Iron Curtain than on the Russian side," the spokesman said.

Canadian legations and embassies in eastern Europe have been headed by charge d'affaires for several years. Canada withdrew its ministers and ambassador from Moscow as a rebuke over the cold war.

Schools Under Attack, Md. Educator Charges

St. Louis, July 4 (AP).—A Maryland educator told the National Education Association last night, in an unscheduled speech, that a general attack is now being organized on public school education in the United States.

Dr. Harold Benjamin of the University of Maryland called his speech "a report on the enemy." He is chairman of the NEA's national commission for the defense of democracy through education.

"The enemy is trying our line with a number of local, probing raids, attempting to find out where we are weak, recruiting and training his forces," Dr. Benjamin said.

He said:

"Under the steam of that indignation of spending money for a modern school program, the enemy has lately gone into some full-scale battles, as in Denver, Minneapolis, Upper Arlington, Ohio, and a number of other communities, large and small.

"In at least one part of the country, the Los Angeles-Pasadena-Glendale area in California, he has apparently started an all-out campaign."

Dr. Benjamin listed the National Council for American Education as a leader in the antischool campaign.

"In the recent Pasadena case," he said, "antitax groups, heated 'patriots,' and opponents of Columbia University's 'Red' pragmatism rallied behind a general, or chief of staff, named Allen A. Zoll." Dr. Benjamin said a badly needed tax increase for elementary education was voted down there.

The educator told some 4000 delegates attending the convention here that in some communities antischool groups have caused revolts against teachers, administrators and school programs.

At today's session Corima Mowrey, of Charlesburg, W., Va., was nominated with without opposition for the presidency of the organization.

Withdrawal of Union Called 'Good Riddance'

St. Louis, July 4 (U.P.).—John K. Norton of Columbia University told the National Educational Association late today that the New York City teachers' union withdrew from the NEA to "avoid being kicked out."

Norton, chairman of the NEA's Educational Policies Commission, said the teachers' union withdrawal was "good riddance of bad rubbish."

The union announced yesterday that it was leaving the NEA because of its policy of barring Communists from membership.

Norton denounced State laws requiring special oaths for teachers or setting up loyalty tests by legislative act.

"Boards of education, administrative officers and teachers are neither dumb nor disloyal," he said. "They can best deal with the rare school employe who joins the Communist cause."

Woman, 90, Celebrates With Dive and Swim

Atlanta, July 4 (U.P.).—A 90-year-old woman celebrated her birthday and Independence Day today by taking a dive off the springboard at a municipal swimming pool. Appropriately, she wore a red, white and blue bathing suit.

Mrs. Arizonabell, a sprightly newspaper vendor and former circus bareback rider, leaped into the pool and swam out under her own steam. A pool attendant said she is a good diver and swimmer.

River Yields Soldier's Body

The body of Corpl. William P. Mulcahy, Fort Belvoir soldier missing since Friday, was recovered late Monday in the Potomac River and identified yesterday at the Army base.

The 20-year-old Chicagoan disappeared while swimming in the Potomac near Hollowing Point, 4 miles south of Belvoir. Surface craft and a helicopter conducted a three-day search before the body was found in the vicinity of Marshall Hall.

2 Fishermen Battle Shark as 300 Watch

No. 1 of a Series

"Gentlemen of the District Commission, I'm an expert On MILK!"

Who am I? Why, I'm a typical District baby of the late 1949 crop. Why am I interested in milk? .. Well, you see I want to live.

Sweet clean pure milk counts a lot in keeping us sub-sub-sub-debs alive. Believe it or not, there was a time, when my grandpop was diapering around the District, that more than 17 out of every 100 human sprouts like me had to die in infancy. Contaminated milk was one of the reasons. Back in those days, babies drank an average of 22,000,000 bacteria with every tiny gulp of milk.

Back in 1925, the District really cracked down on those milk-borne bacteria. The Health Officer forced every farm supplying the District to sterilize every milk pail, milk can and other utensil in live steam!

This boiler and this live-steam sterilizing unit are typical of the equipment which all dairy farmers serving the District were forced to use, from 1925 until World War II caused the Health Officer to admit a small amount of milk from farms using an inferior method of washing utensils in a chemical solution.

Farms using live steam to protect my health, by sterilizing milk utensils, can now supply the District with all the milk it needs. As an expert on clean, sweet, pure milk, I'm for that . . . but a controversy seems to have arisen. . . . It seems that the chemical solution swishers would each have to spend about $3.64 per month to clean their milk pails, etc., with live steam. They want the wartime laxity on steam-sterilization made permanent.

Wouldn't you holler, if you were a baby in a city with the most rigid milk-for-health sanitary regulations in the U. S., if you figured these regulations were going to be softened to favor a few suppliers? Of course the District babies are squawking!

This advertisement is paid for by the 1,700 dairy farmers who have served the District with the finest milk in the world for many years. These people have always used live steam to sterilize milk-handling equipment. They helped reduce infant mortality in the District. Now they ask the mothers and fathers of the District to help them.

The members of this Association of dairy farmers are glad to keep steam sterilization. They can't keep it if a double-health-standard is allowed in the District milk supply.

You Can Help

On July 10, a hearing will be held by the District Commissioners on the subject of making the wartime laxity on chemical sterilization permanent. We hope you will go to this hearing, or get your church or club to send a representative. The Commissioners are interested in your welfare. Let them know that sweet, clean pure milk is of vital interest to you.

Payments Plan Up Thursday For Approval

Paris, July 4 (NYHT).—Leaders of the Marshall Plan countries will meet in Paris Thursday to give their final approval to the European Payments Union and to begin finding out where western Europe goes from here.

Much of the business of the 18-nation group—the Ministerial Council of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation—will concern the next steps to be taken toward "integration." At the same time, the council is expected to approve questionnaires aimed at finding out, if possible, what economic policies are going to guide the individual countries and the major branches of the European economy in the next five years.

The Payments Union is now virtually taken for granted, with general agreement on all major issues. What the Council must do at this meeting is to inspect the detailed plan drawn up by the technicians and, after approving it, hand it on to legal experts for the drafting of a constitution.

This process is expected to consume the rest of the summer. When the Payments Union goes into operation as a clearing system for western European commercial payments, it will be retroactive to July 1, when the old system expired. In the meantime, the OEEC members are handling their payments arrangements with each other on a temporary basis.

IN THE PARLANCE of the turf, the pennant contenders in the two major leagues have just hit the far turn and from now on will have to make the real run for it. This is the point where the faint hearted and the outclassed begin to drop out of it, and the better clubs start to drive.

You'd have to say that the pennant races are two beauts. In the American League, four teams are still solidly in it with Detroit the slight favorite. In the National League, six teams are actually still in the race, and from here on it could be breathtaking among the Cardinals, the Phillies, the Braves and the Dodgers.

POVICH

The sentimental favorites are, perhaps, the Tigers and Phillies; certainly a Phillie victory, the first for that team since 1915 would be popular, and they have something in common—their youth—which may be paying off.

For the league presidents, Ford Frick and Will Harridge, it is all quite wonderful. It's rare when a game doesn't present at least one pennant contender, and that being a hike in over-all attendance. The league president who can show the clubowners that gate receipts are up, is a success.

THE VERY ITEM which has been a factor in the Phils' fast get-away, their youth, will be facing a new kind of pressure in August and September. Manager Eddie Sawyer is blessed with a remarkable trio of young pitchers in Robin Roberts, Curt Simmons and Bob Miller, who would be the big reason if the Phillies do get home in front.

The very factor—pitching—which has transformed the Phils into a grim contender, is the chink in the armor of the Dodgers, who would be making a run-away of it had not their staff collapsed. But if Burt Shotten can assemble some help for Preacher Roe and Don Newcombe, the Dodgers could still take it all because they have everything else to win with.

This year's Cardinals are the hot-and-cold team. A month ago they swept into Brooklyn and Philadelphia and won seven straight against the two teams they were supposed to lick, only to lose 12 of their next 15 games. But with such stretch-drive campaigners as Musial, Slaughter, Marion and Lanier the Cardinals at this point can't be dismissed.

IN THE American League, Manager Red Rolfe of the league-leading Tigers is obviously holding his breath. He knows what has been apparent all year—that the Tigers have been a lucky outfit, free from injury except for the defection of Virgil Trucks' arm, and that he is operating with the thinnest bench in the league.

Injury to any of his infielders or outfielders would be a blow the Tigers might not survive. Their reserves are the league's weakest. And that goes, too, for his catching department where Aaron Robinson is his only capable man. The Tigers have been an ironman club for the first half of the season, but their good luck must stay with them or it could be a sad October in Detroit.

If there is a surprise outfit in the American League, it is Cleveland. The Indians weren't supposed to figure in the pennant but as the week opened they were crowding the Yanks for second place, only four games out of the lead, and in a year when Lou Boudreau and Joe Gordon washed out as members of the infield. As a team, and individually, the Indians qualify as the surprise of the circuit.

THEY ARE a factor despite an all-rookie infield of Luke Easter, Bob Avila, Ray Boone and Al Rosen. And in the case of Rosen, they have a kid who just moved in front of Ted Williams for the home run lead with his twenty-fifth. Rosen and big Luke Easter, plus Larry Doby, give the Indians a one-two-three punch in the middle of their lineup unequaled in the league.

The Red Sox, with a change in managers, have reacted like the good ball team they were supposed to be and lately have been rising above their weak pitching. Their chief virtue is that with all their kind of power they can win badly-pitched ball games. They were 11 games behind at this point for the past two seasons and then almost won it, it is remembered.

Least solid of the top American League contenders are the second-place Yanks, who have been laboring without a first baseman, have seen Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich slow up badly, and aren't getting a good job this year from Joe Page. The Yanks, early-season favorites to take it all, could wind up fourth and everybody would understand why.

Wight Trips Detroit, 4-1, But Tigers Win 2d, 10-9

Chicago, July 4 (AP).—The first-place Detroit Tigers used two scoring spurts, a four-run first and a six-run fifth, to beat the Chicago White Sox in a 10-9 second game slugfest today. Lefty Bill Wight won a 4-1 duel from Hal White in the opener before 35,998 persons.

The split cut Detroit's first-place lead in the American League to four games, because New York won and tied in a doubleheader in Washington.

Rookie Saul Rogovin ended up with his first Major League victory in the second game. He checked the White Sox on three hits during the last four and one-third innings.

Robinson Homers

Detroit clubbed starter Bob Cain for a 4-0 lead in the first inning when Hoot Evers doubled for two runs behind a leadoff walk to Johnny Lipton and Jerry Priddy's double.

Detroit jumped on Rookie Charley Cuellar for all of its six runs in the fat fifth. Priddy's infield out scored Hal Newhouser with what proved to be the winning run. Newhouser was chased in the home half of the same inning for his fourth straight failure to finish a starting assignment.

Bob Kuzava, Lopat Duel To 3-3 Draw In Nightcap

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats dropped a messy 16-9 game to the Yankees early yesterday, and then Bob Kuzava gave them a face-saving pitching job late in the afternoon to hold the Yanks to a 3-3 tie in the second contest.

The Fourth of July crowd of 25,229 saw the Yankees make a Roman holiday of the first game, scoring six runs in the ninth inning on only two hits and a bundle of walks.

Bucky Harris shoved five pitchers into that first fray, starting with Sid Hudson and they were progressively worse. They were whacked for 17 hits while walking nine.

Kuzava made a brave effort to get the Nats even in the second game, and didn't give up a run after the fourth inning, but Ed Lopat was doing a passel of pitching for the Yankees, too. He shut the Nats out after they tied the score in the fifth.

At 7:40 p. m., after six hours and ten minutes of baseball, Umpire Bill Summers said he'd had enough, after the Nats went scoreless in the ninth. "Impending darkness" was the official excuse.

Yanks Start In Again

Kuzava was pitching without much luck in the early innings of the second game. The Yanks took a 1-0 lead at the start when Rizzuto singled, stole second and went to third on Ostrowski's erratic return of Mape's fly to left. Jensen's fly to left got the run home.

A fly ball by Grasso fetched the Nats the tying run in the second after Ostrowski and Dente banged consecutive singles to left.

In the fourth, the Yanks moved ahead, 3-1, after a walk to Jensen. With one out, he stole second and raced to third when Grasso threw into center field. With the Nats' infield playing close, Johnson banged a single past Dente that scored Jensen. Mize nubbed a single to center, and Johnson scored from Third while Kuzava was throwing out Coleman.

It was Lopat's turn to be slighted by the breaks in the fifth and the Nats nudged home the two tying runs after he put Kuzava on base with a walk.

Michael's pop fly over Mize's head fell safe by inches for a single, and Kuzava raced to second. Noren singled to right and Mapes bobbed the ball, both Kuzava and Michaels scoring with Noren reaching third. But with only one out, the Nats couldn't get him home. Vernon grounded to Rizzuto, who was playing close, and Coleman made a smart pick-up on Mele's ground ball.

Hudson Blows Lead

In that first game, Hudson took a 5-4 lead into the seventh in his battle with Raschi after Eddie Yost's walk and Eddie Stewart's triple to right center unlocked a 4-4 tie in the sixth.

Then Phil Rizzuto launched the seventh with a single to left and the grief started to pile up for Hudson and the Nats. It wound up as a five-run Yankee inning, with Woodling driving home the tying run on a single to right.

That blow dispatched Hudson and Rookie Elmer Singleton, fresh from a five-day auto trip from California, walked into the game. His first act was to wild-pitch Woodling to second. With two out, he threw a double to Berra and Wooding scored. When he walked Mize, he was asked to take a walk himself and Mickey Harris moved in.

Harris was no help. Mapes rocked him for a double to left center and Coleman singled for the Yanks' fourth and fifth runs. And

Musial Raps 2 Homers, Cubs Yield Twice

St. Louis, July 4 (AP).—Two home runs by Stan Musial and effective pitching by Max Lanier and Harry Brecheen gave the St. Louis Cardinals a pair of victories over the Chicago Cubs today, 4 to 1 and 4 to 3 and increased their first place lead over the Phillies to 1½ games.

Both of Musial's four-baggers followed a double by Tommy Glaviano in the first game and by Red Schoendienst in the nightcap.

Brecheen trailed briefly in the second contest as the Cubs scored on Wayne Terwilliger's triple and Bill Serena's single in the first inning. The visitors added another in the second when Phil Cavarretta doubled, took third on a wild pitch and stole home.

But in the third the Redbirds took the lead for keeps. Schoendienst doubled and Musial homered to open the frame. Glenn Nelson then singled Bill Howerton home from second but a doubleplay on Del Rice's grounder stopped the rally.

The Cubs weren't able to hit Lanier in the first game until the seventh inning when Bob Borkowski singled.

The aging but swashbuckling Cardinals were perfectly content to believe the old adage about the July 4 league leader being the pennant winner.

Substantiating the tradition is the fact that 31 of the last 50 leaders led at the Independence Day point.

Braves Split With Phillies On Grand Slam

Philadelphia, July 4 (AP).—Sid Gordon's fourth grand slam homer of the year provided the Boston Braves with an even break against the Philadelphia Phillies today.

The Phils won the opener 14-5 for Robin Roberts' tenth win of the year. Then Gordon equalled a major league mark set 39 years ago by hitting his circuit clout in the ninth to enable the Braves to win the nightcap, 12 to 9.

Gordon's swat climaxed a wild afternoon at Shibe Park, with 40 runs scored on 55 hits good for 92 total bases.

Included in the assault on pitchers were six homers—two with the bases loaded—five triples and nine doubles. Twelve pitchers saw action.

Most of the holiday fireworks came in the second game. The Braves built up a 7-0 lead before the Phils could score and the Phils continued to pick away at Boston pitching until they had gone ahead, 9 to 8 before Gordon ended things.

Granny Hamner of the Phils and Del Crandall also hit for the circuit.

Roberts had an easy time of it in the first game after Andy Seminick's first inning grand slammer, off Starter Norman Roy. Willie Jones also connected for the circuit. So did Gordon but no one was one base at the time.

Gordon is the eighth major leaguer in history to hit four

Wood Hits Grand Slam

Browns Stop Indians, 8-3, After Losing Opener, 8-7

Cleveland, July 4 (AP).—Those "weak" St. Louis Browns put another chill on Cleveland's pennant ambitions today, whacking three Indian pitchers for 14 hits and winning the second game of a doubleheader, 8 to 3.

Cleveland won the first game, 8 to 7, but the series went to the Browns, two games to one. The Indians had won their last seven series.

Outfielder Thurman Tucker knocked in the winning run for Cleveland with a pop single in the ninth inning of the opener.

Sedgman Ousts Larsen, Ruins All-American Tennis Final

Wimbledon, July 4 (AP).—Chances of an all-American men's final in the All-England Lawn Tennis Championships vanished on the center court at Wimbledon today.

But on the neighboring No. 1 court the United States made certain that it will have one man in the last two for the fifth straight year.

Top-seeded Frank Sedgman of Australia fought back from what looked to be certain defeat to whip Art Larsen of San Leandro, Calif., in the most thrilling five-set struggle the hallowed center court has seen in many a year, 8-10, 5-7, 7-5, 6-3, 7-5.

Then Jaroslav Drobny of Egypt polished off Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, Fla., with ease, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

This fixed up tomorrow's upper bracket semifinal—just as the tournament committee had expected—Sedgman vs. Drobny.

Next door the committee's form sheet took a beating.

Budge Patty, a native of California who isn't ranked in the United States because he spends most of his time in France, mopped up on Billy Talbert of New York, America's second ranking amateur, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3.

And Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, outlasted fourth-seeded Eric Sturgess of South Africa, 9-7, 6-8, 3-6, 6-2, 7-5.

Patty, seeded No. 5, will meet Seixas, seeded No. 12 in the other semifinal tomorrow.

Today's winners were Louise Brough, the defending champion from Beverly Hills, Calif.; Mrs. Margaret Osborne duPont, American titleholder from Wilmington, Del.; Barbara Scofield of San Francisco; Gussie Moran of Santa Monica, Calif.; and Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio.

They joined Doris Hart of Jacksonville, Fla., and Mrs. Pat Todd of LaJolla, Calif., who had moved into the quarter finals on Saturday.

Miss Brough trounced Miss E. M. S. Andrews of Britain, 6-0, 6-0. Mrs. duPont downed Jean Quertier of Britain, 6-2, 6-2. Miss Moran defeated Mrs. Mary Halford of Britain, 6-2, 6-1.

Marcey Bows In Publinx

Louisville, Ky., July 4 (AP).—The Washington delegation lost its last hopeful in the National Public Links Gold Tournament today when Earl Lee Marcey of Arlington was eliminated in the second round by Jim Levenhagen of Milwaukee, 3 and 1.

Marcey, seeing his first round of action as a result of a bye in yesterday's first round, went six over par on the first nine holes and made the turn two-down to his opponent.

He picked up a hole on the eleventh, but dropped the thirteenth and fourteenth to diminish his hopes of making a comeback. He finished the 16 holes in 12 over Seneca course's rugged par.

Ken towns, the California cop, kept going today in defense of his championship as he eliminated Jack Russell, Memphis, 2 and 1, in a second round match.

Nat 'Alumni' Win 3, Lose 1

WASHINGTON's pitching alumni had a busy day around the minor leagues yesterday.

In San Francisco, two ex-Nats, Steve Nagy of the Seals and Jack Salveson of Hollywood opposed each other, with Salveson, a member of Washington's 1935 staff, winning, 5-3.

Also in the Pacific Coast League, Al Gettel, who pitched here last year, turned in a six-hit 9-1 victory for Oakland over Los Angeles.

In Chattanooga, two former Nat moundsmen teamed up to provide the Southern Association Lookouts with a doubleheader split against Nashville. In the opener, Dick Welteroth and Lloyd Hittle, who started the season here, combined to pitch a four-hit 3-0 triumph.

Alex Carrasquel, the crafty Venezuelan righthander, who worked here in the early 1940s, did a six-inning relief chore, as his Buffalo mates dropped a 9-4 International League decision to Toronto. He wasn't charged with the loss, so the ex-Nats won three and lost one for the day.

Marines Beat Firemen 9-7

The Quantico Marines defeated the Fire Department baseball team 9-7 yesterday at Quantico at Glenn Omholt hit a homer with one on and Carl Goodiel hit another with two men on base to spark a five-run fifth inning.

Bums Split With Giants, Snap 6-Game-Streak on Edwards' Homer, 5-3

Mueller's Hit Wins 1st For N. Y., 5-4

New York, July 4 (AP).—Bruce Edwards' home run with one aboard in the fourth inning and splendid relief pitching by Erv Palica gave the Brooklyn Dodgers a 5-3 second game triumph over the New York Giants and a split of their holiday doubleheader today.

The Giants knocked Don Newcombe out of the box with a three-run rally in the eighth to win the opener, 5-3, before some 50,000 spectators.

Don Mueller's two-run pinch single in that inning was the big blow. The loss in the opener was the sixth straight for the dodgers in a slump broken only by a Sunday tie with Philadelphia. Newcombe hit his first major league homer and Duke Snider also homered for the Brooks. Al Dark hit his eighth for the Giants.

Favored Middleground Third To Post Card, County Delight

Wilmington, Del., July 4 (AP).—King Ranch's Middleground lost some ground in his quest for 3-year-old honors today when he could do no better than third to Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Post Card and Rokeby Stables' County Delight in the $22,500 added Leonard Richards Stakes, closing day feature at Delaware Park.

Post Card took the lead in the final eighth of the mile and a furlong trip and came home less than a length before County Delight. Middleground went along easily in fifth place in the six-horse field until reaching the stretch where the Derby and Belmont winner moved into third position and was beaten 2½ lengths for the place award.

The holiday throng of 21,000 wagered $49,223 of the total straight pool of $83,773 on Middleground and the son of Bold Venture went off the board a "1-2" favorite. The payoffs were Post Card, $15.20, $6.50, $3; County Delight, $23.30, $5.30 and Middleground, $2.40.

The Leonard Richards was worth $24,150 to Post Card's owner and was the first major victory for the son of Firethorn and Ace Card. He was second to Your Host in the Kent Stakes and today's score more than doubled his previous earnings of $19,300.

Post Card carried 115 pounds and was timed in 1:50 flat. One and three-fifths seconds off the time run by Capot in the Kent Stakes last year. The colt was handled flawlessly by Johnny Gilbert, the meeting's leading rider.

Penn. A. C. Runner Takes 10-Mile Race

John St. Clair, of Pennsylvania Athletic Club, upset record holder Lou DiFazio, of the Mutual of Omaha team, in the annual ten mile AAU run at Takoma Park yesterday.

St. Clair led DiFazio to the finish line by 38 seconds to win.

St. Clair's time for the ten mile grind was 59 minutes, 35.3 seconds, almost four and a half minutes slower than the record DiFazio set last year, 55 minutes, .8 seconds. DiFazio was seeking his third straight win in the event.

Jimmy Carrick, 36, the five feet tall, 118 pound distance runner from Washington Track and Field Club, finished 12th in the field, but was the first District entrant to cross the finish line, automatically becoming District AAU 10-mile champ.

Bolling Meets Quantico Tonight In Charity Game

The supremacy of the Quantico Marines among area service baseball teams will be challenged tonight by Bolling Air Force Base in a benefit game at Griffith Stadium.

Before play ball is called at 8 o'clock, Marine Sergeant Bruce McAllister, whose loud "whoops" at the Nats' games are practically an institution, will limber up his vocal chords. An Air Force representative will try to out-yell him.

Quantico has won 60 out of 69 games this season and has lost only two games to service teams. Proceeds will go toward sending underprivileged children of the area to summer camps.

Anglers Can Improve Casting Weekends at Memorial Pool

By Ralph Murdock

HARRY H. MILLARD, secretary of the National Capital Casting Club, sponsor of the 1950 Eastern Association of Amateur Clubs second annual championship casting tournament, to be held in the District July 15-16, writes an interesting article in a recent issue of The Masthead entitled "Fishing vs. Tournament Casting."

Murdock

Harry writes, "Does tournament casting help you catch more fish?" and answers, "Dick Miller, Earl Osten and Tony Acceta are but a few of the outstanding tournament casters who have utilized their tournament experiences to design and perfect the modern rods and reels which every fisherman now accepts as standard fishing tackle."

Millard adds, "It should be obvious that the ability to place a fly or plug or spoon where you want it will improve your fishing ability."

We might say that a good bait caster is usually a pretty good fisherman and invariably ends up with his share of fish.

Harry concludes: "All fishermen who would like to improve their casting are cordially invited to meet with us (The National Capital Casting Club) at the west end of the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool any Saturday afternoon or Sunday morning."

PRIVATE S. E. Dennis of the Hyattsville Police Department and Robert Stock, fished three nights for hardheads during the past week. Their catches were 21, 23, and 24 respectively.

Each catch was made between 11 p. m. and 3 a. m. which is proof positive that the hardheads are biting only during those hours. (The time when most anglers have quit.)

"On Saturday night," said Dennis, "we were in mid-channel off Blackston in the Potomac River drifting. The Norfolk boat passed within 75 yards of us. We caught 21 big ones that night." This pair of ardent fishermen hail from Greenbelt, Md.

SO FAR the lower Patuxent and Potomac Rivers have furnished the best fishing. Raymond Taylor, China Reed, and Angler Keller picked up 16 big croakers at Sand Gates in a rowboat which they got from Captain Posey.

H. L. Choate, while fishing with his wife and two anglers, nailed seven nice hardheads. Included in the catch was a 5½-pound croaker which could be the "champ" for this area. The hefty was 21¾ inches long and was caught by Mr. Choate.

ANGLERS ARE forever trying new ideas to fool the fish and Jerry Jones is no exception. On Sunday, Jerry tried out frozen grass shrimp on the Wicomico River.

Fishing from a rowboat he picked up 70 perch and hardheads. The new bait was purchased from the Anacostia Sport Mart. It sells for $1.25 per quart. We have seen it, but never tried it. Jones says it works.

Some excellent catches of bass are being made at Piscataway Creek which empties into the Potomac River near Fort Washington. The big fish was a 6-pound smallmouth.

Payne Trims Spencer for Virginia Title

Hot Springs, Va., July 4 (AP).—Dick Payne of Norfolk defeated Wynsol Spencer of Newport News, 2 up, for the 1950 Virginia State Amateur Golf Championship.

Wearing the same sweater he wouldn't part with throughout the tourney, Payne, 32-year-old cotton salesman, was never down in this 36-hole battle over the par 71 Cascades course and its 6754 yards.

Payne swept into the lead on the very first hole, and stayed there.

With the holes running out, Spencer came through with the tournament's finest shot to keep the match alive. It came on the 509-yard thirty-fifth hole.

Payne, putting from 45 feet, didn't quite find the hole, the ball rolling to a standstill five inches from the cup. It was a direct stymie. Spencer chipped over Payne's ball with a beautiful shot that struck the back of the cup and tumbled in. It was a birdie four for Spencer and sent them to the thirty-sixth hole.

The thirty-sixth was a thriller, too. Spencer's drive from the tee on the short 209-yarder was far to the left of the green. Payne was 25 feet from the pin. Spencer's chip shot landed on the green and moved in an arching half-circle toward the cup, missed by a couple of inches and rolled two feet beyond.

Spencer's putter failed him again and Payne won the match.

Charles Town Fans Celebrate July 4th With $117 Winner

AT CHARLESTOWN

DEAR FOLKS:

Johnny Arduini, the Washington boxer, spends his time between fights in the role of jockey agent. At present he has apprentice, Frank Perticari, his cousin, under his wing. H. G. Allnutt, Rockville, Md., owner-trainer has purchased the 2-year-old Diamond Head from the Auburn farm. The consensus, after the race, was that Irish Rebel, the $117 winner on the holiday card, "could have been played on her record." With Detroit closed, Ray Haight will take over the P. A. system and the daily broadcast here on Thursday. The four powerful horses, who pull the starting gate, were gaily decorated with red, white, and blue yarn and red tassels. Horses are used incidentally because they are more dependable than tractors. After seeing Caraway perform like a wild horse entering the stretch, I wonder if Jockey Henri Mora warranted his 14-day suspension at Delaware Park on the same horse.—BILL.

Double Pays $1753 to 9 Customers

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., July 4—Miss Prime won the Independence Day purse and Maxim Queen won the Firecracker purse but the big explosion here today came in the second race. Showing disregard for her highly touted rivals, a mare named Irish Rebel hauled off and took a race in going away fashion.

Her victory caused (1) the displaying of an across-the-board mutuel of $117 to win, $34.40 to place and $12.40 to show (2) the checking of $1,753.40 payoff on the daily double.

The Midas touch on the 10-and-5 double combination went to nine very satisfied customers in a holiday crowd of 7500 who bet more than a quarter of a million dollars.

Only Fourth Start

Irish Rebel, owned by R. D. Carlson, was ridden by Jockey Walter Hermam and although a 5-year-old, had started only three times before today. Among others she whipped N. T. Mayo's Devil's Broom and Angela Tammaro's Arneport.

Miss Prime carried the colors of J. N. Barnes to victory in the day's feature but she had to be ridden out by Jockey Stanley Ausridden to get home a neck in front of the fast-closing Marbacka, owned by Mrs. F. C. Lamoureux. Third in the field of eight was W. I. Jones' Grand Actress.

It was in the role of favorite, at a $5.80 mutuel, that the 7-year-old daughter of Swashbuckler turned in her eighth victory of the year. She was clocked in 1:21⅘ for the 6½ furlongs over a racing strip slightly dulled by intermittent showers.

Another Winner for Austin

Austin also was up on Maxim Queen, the secondary winner in the silks of E. B. Lee, of White Post, Va. It was a rather lucky victory because Mrs. R. N. Boerner's Fashion Hit, beaten by a brief nose via of the camera, was carried out entering the stretch by D. K. Kerr's Caraway, the favorite.

Mangrum Wins at Detroit, Snead Blows 3-Stroke Lead on Last 9

Sam Flubs Chance to Tie on 18th

Detroit, July 4 (AP).—Lloyd Mangrum, came from behind today on the last nine holes to edge out Sammy Snead and win the 1950 Motor City open golf tournament with a 274.

The chain-smoking Mangrum was three down to Snead going into the final nine and most of the gallery of 10,000 figured Snead, No. 1 money winner of pro golf this year, was going to pocket the $2600 first prize money.

But Mangrum rallied with a great back nine, racking up a pair of birdies in those final holes to finish with a 36-34—70. Then he had to sit by and watch Snead's vain efforts to edge the Chicagoan out.

Snead had a 33—three under par—going out but two bogies on the final nine boosted him to a 38-71—275, one stroke behind Mangrum.

Snead gave the big gallery a real golfing thrill on the eighteenth on which he needed a birdie four for a tie. His second shot just missed a trap but he chipped beautifully to within 4 feet of the pin.

He flubbed that putt, however, and had to settle for par and second money of $1900.

Mangrum, Snead and Fred Haas, Jr., of Claremont, Calif., were in a three-way tie at 204 going into today's competition but Haas had troubles and carded a 74 for 278.

The former Louisiana State star's worst moments came on the final hole as he dubbed two wood shots and then drove over the green to settle for a seven, a double bogie.

Jim Ferrier, the big San Franciscan, grabbed off third place money of $1400 as he duplicated yesterday's 70 for a 276 total.

National Open Champion Ben Hogan was in a six-way tie for eleventh place with 283. He had 73 today and earned $348.33 for the four-way tournament.

Cary Middlecoff got $570 for finishing in a two-way tie at 282.

Bulla's 140 Leads Field In British Open

Troon, Scotland, July 4 (AP).—Johnny Bulla, pro from Pittsburgh, wielded a hot putter today to lead all qualifiers in the British Open golf championship.

And $42 is just what Johnny earned with his two rounds of 70 for a 140 total that was four strokes under par for the two qualifying courses. That amount—15 pounds—is the prize for the low qualifying total. He had his 70 today at Lochgreen.

Bulla's steadiness eclipsed more spectacular shotmakers like defending Champion Bobby Locke and Flory Van Donck, the Belgian pro who fired a sensational 65 at Troon yesterday.

They both qualified easily as did three other Americans besides Bulla. Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, holder of the British Amateur title, set an amateur record of 69 for the Lochgreen course today to lead all the amateurs in the tournament with 143. Jimmy McHale of Philadelphia had 144 and Skinny Art Clark, a pro from Huntington, W. Va., had 147 after equaling Stranahan's 69.

Three Americans didn't get into the final 72-hole test. Sergt. Charles Rotar, a pro from Canton, Ohio, now in the Army at Frankfurt, Germany, shot 154—just one stroke outside the magic circle. Two amateurs, Kenneth Gordon of Montclair, N. J., and William Hilditch of Newark, N. J., just couldn't play well enough. Gordon totaled 158 and Hilditch 161.

Little Norman Von Nida, the Australian who has been on the American tournament circuit lately, finished second to Bulla with 341. Von Nida added a 71 to yesterday's 70.

Then came Locke and Van Donck, the first-round sensations, bracketed with W. D. Smithers, a British pro, at 142.

Van Donck, whose opening 65 at Troon was a course record, couldn't find the greens at Lochgreen today with a 77. Locke, after firing a record 68 over the Lochgreen layout, blew four over par with a 74 on the championship course at Troon.

Golfing Roundup

Navy Golfers Top Army, Air Force

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

THE NAVY sank both the Army and the Air Force on the golf links yesterday in the annual interservice Fourth of July tournament at Army Navy Country Club.

Navy rolled up a total of 150 points against 119 for Army and 118 for the Air Force. A field of 141 golfers paired off in threesomes, one golfer representing each service.

The Army salvaged some consolation from the fact that their Col. S. S. Griffin's one-over-par 73 was the best score of the day. After the tournament, the Army and Air Force linksmen picked up the check for a banquet at the clubhouse.

BELLE HAVEN: Eddie Frank's four-under-par 66, the best score carded at Belle Haven this year, won him both low net and low gross in the 18 hole Sweepstakes.

On the front nine Frank birdied the first three holes. He bogied the 9th to have a two-under 34. Frank birdied 12, 13, and 17 on the back nine but bogied the 15th. His net score for the round was 66-6-60. Merrill Lafferty was second with 79-15-64, and George Record third with 85-20-65.

Mrs. R. Collier and Oscar Keep, 87-24-63, won the mixed Scotch foursome. Mrs. Robert Hoffman and Alfred Wilson were second with a net 64, and Mrs. Oscar Keef and Robert Collier were third with a net 65. Mrs. John Mancos and Oliver Donohoe won low gross with 82.

ROCK CREEK: Gretchen Huff and John McNabb won the mixed Scotch foursome with 78-7—71. Dot Houston and Bill Nicholson won a playoff for second from Jessie Cook and Tex Carpenter. Both had 80-8—72s.

EAST POTOMA: Ted King beat Happy Olds 2 and 1 in the semi-final of the flight of the J. R. Tomlin Trophy contest. In the quarter finals of the second flight Frank Battita beat Paul Green 2 and 1; Tom Wherrity beat Tony Varcolik 1 up; Jerry Baldy beat Al Dunay 2 up and Paul McMahon beat Ellsworth Homan 6 and 5.

COLUMBIA: The blind bogey ended in a tie at 74 between Emery Hutchison, Roy Turke, L. T. Lachlen, Richard Essex, Slater Davison, G. M. Farris, W. B. Putnam, George Hughley, J. E. Munroe, G. W. Daisley, W. D. Osgood, H. B. Nichols and M. M. Fillius.

PRINCE GEORGES: Mrs. Fred Chaimson won the flag tournament, finishing in the cup of the 20th hole. Mrs. Jack Smith and Mrs. Billow Smith tied for second, ending in the cup of the 19th hole. Mrs. Eddie Bean was fourth, two and a half feet from the 19th cup.

The men's flag tournament was won by Jimmy Gipe, who finished four feet from the ball of Pro Al Houghton which was 14 feet from the 19th hole. W. Rochelle was second, and Bob Chandler and Jack Evans, 8 feet distant, were tied for third. Mike Jankowski took low gross with 70 in the medal play sweeps.

Jerry Burch won the pitching contest with a shot four feet from the cup from 40 feet out. Jim Novak and George Volger with 31 putts each tied for the low putt. Amos Dodge's drive of 290 yards won the driving contest.

BETHESDA: Bethesda had a novel flag tournament in which member-contestants tried to guess where Pro Harry Griesmer would finish in his allotted 73 strokes and end as closely as possible to where he did.

Griesmer finished in the cup on the 17th hole. Harvey Thorson, Ken Sime, Sherman Burt and Arnold Babb tied for first, finishing in the same place. Edwina Hurd won the ladies' prize, finishing 17 inches from the 17th cup.

WOODMONT: The flag tournament ended in a three-way tie between Sam Parker, Alvin Dulcan and Alvin Miller on the 19th hole. Dave Barrow took the hole-in-one contest, held on the 137-yard 17th, when his shot landed only three feet from the pin. Buddy Kahn took driving honors with a 300 yarder.

Dulcan shot a two-under par 30 on the new nine to better Bobby Goldstein's record of 31, made only Sunday. Eddie Edlowitz came up with a 150-yard 7-iron shot which plunked into the cup on the fifth hole. His tee shot landed in the woods, and was lost. Eddie took out a new ball, and holed it.

MANOR: The 36-hole sweeps ended in a tie between J. S. Murray, 174-40—134, and Paul Rusher, 166-32—134. R. S. Jacobs was third with a net 135. Bill Griffin won low gross with 72-73—145.

Davies' 164 yard average won the women's driving event. Merrill Salter won the chip and putting contest with 4.

'Reasons My Own'

Nurse Kills Self After Gun Practice

The body of a 24-year-old newly-married Casualty Hospital nurse, victim of a carefully planned suicide, was found yesterday morning in a clump of woods off Sargent rd. in Prince Georges County.

The nurse, Mrs. Carolyn J. Gillespie, was reported missing from her home at 5303 15th pl., Chillum Heights, on Monday. Her husband of about a month, Keith Gillespie, told Prince Georges police she had not been home since 9 a. m. Sunday.

In a note found by her slacks-and-jacket-clad body, she wrote that she had never before fired a gun, but had tested the suicide weapon twice before firing the fatal shot, Detective Richard A. Pearson revealed. A .32 caliber automatic was found near her body, he said. One bullet had entered her head.

A certificate of suicide was issued by Dr. John T. Maloney, county medical examiner. Cause of death was listed as brain hemorrhage and shock.

In a blue-penciled note, dated 1 p. m. July 2, the nurse wrote she was "doing away with myself for reasons of my own."

A fresh 25-cartridge box, with 17 bullets remaining, was found in a pocket, police said.

According to her husband, a gas station attendant, Mrs. Gillespie had been "morbid" for the last month, Pearson said.

The detective said hospital authorities told him her work was "satisfactory" and that she had recently been placed in charge of a floor.

Man is Slain, Police Arrest 'Peacemaker'

A peacemaker, summoned twice by a woman neighbor in Bladensburg to quiet a disorderly visitor, was charged with murder early yesterday after the unruly guest was stabbed fatally.

The victim, Douglas A. O'Malley, 30, a tilesetter of 230 S st. ne., died en route to Prince Georges General Hospital shortly after 9 p. m. Monday. He was stabbed under the heart with a carving knife, Baldensburg police said.

Charged with murder was Nicholas J. Lutzio, 42, a truck driver, of 4317 Baltimore ave., Bladensburg. He is being held without bond in the Hyattsville jail for a hearing there Thursday.

The stabbing occurred at the home of Mrs. Margaret Goddard at 4401 Baltimore ave., Bladensburg.

Sergt. William Baxter of the Bladensburg police said the woman told him O'Malley had been drinking and had become unruly. She summoned Lutzio, who quieted him down and left, police said.

After Lutzio was called a second time, he told Baxter, O'Malley lunged at him with the carving knife. During a struggle for possession of the knife, O'Malley was stabbed, Lutzio told the policeman.

After the stabbing, O'Malley staggered to a nearby parking lot where he was found by the policeman. Lutzio was arrested in the parking lot, Baxter said.

Man Ends Life With Shotgun In Fairfax Home

The victim's wife, who was in the kitchen, told police Batchelder had been threatening suicide since his discharge from the armed services in 1942. The couple's 11-year-old son, John, was playing in the yard at the time of the shooting.

Patient Detective Prescribes Arrest for Washington Nurse

Precinct Detective Joseph A. Gabrys of the police narcotics squad prescribed arrest on the grounds that Mrs. Elizabeth F. Dowell, although a registered nurse, was not allowed to practice medicine.

Gabrys, 37, a veteran of 10 years on the force, three legitimate doctors' offices and two hospitals, told it this way:

On June 22 he was assigned to investigate a complaint that a Mrs. Elizabeth F. Dowell, 43, of 612 E. Capitol st., was violating the healing arts practice act.

Mrs. Dowell, Gabrys reported extracted three drops of blood from his finger. He gave her $5 towards the $15 diagnosis fee and was told to report back in a few days.

On June 26 Mrs. Dowell, according to Gabrys, reeled off her diagnosis: Heart condition, blood clot of the heart, ruptured blood vessel, ruptured spleen, low blood pressure, low blood count, vitamin deficiency, protein deficiency, and incipient leukemia.

Then, Gabrys recounted, she handed him medicines of many colors, some in pill form and some liquid, and said that would be $17, please. Gabrys peeled off another fiver on account; secured a Municipal Court warrant for Mrs. Dowell's arrest, and returned to her basement diagnosis office yesterday. He was accompanied by his "sister", Pvt. Fern V. Louthan, of the police Women's Bureau.

"Actually, I made a slight error in your diagnosis. Instead of a ruptured spleen you have an infected spleen."

She went on to assure the patient she ould cure all his troubles. She pointed out her method of diagnosis was more accurate than any in the medical profession at large. She used a radio detector that measured things in minute quantities, she said. And that made all the difference. That way she could detect the blood clot that was bothering him, it being a very tiny little blood clot.

Then she asked him to strip down to the waist and when he did, administered a chiropractic treatment. She said that would be only $5 more, and the patient, after putting his shirt and tie back on, said he had some bad news for her. He identified himself as a policeman and told her about the warrant and that she was under arrest for violating the healing art practice act.

"I thought I was going to have to play doctor," Detective Gabrys later recounted. "She looked like she was going to faint."

Mrs. Dowell, who protested that she was only a technical assistant to a chiropracter, was booked at the Women's Bureau and released under $300 bond for appearance today in criminal division of Municipal Court.

Gabrys said he would ask for a continuance pending analysis of the medicine which he said included unidentified black tablets, soybean food, a bottle containing an opaque liquid and seafood vitamins.

As for his malady, Gabrys nervously laughed, he'll continue to assume that the three registered doctors and two hospitals he had visited while off duty correctly diagnosed his problem as a nervous stomach.

Arlington Pinball Drive Is Promised

Arlington's Commonwealth Attorney Denman T. Rucker promised yesterday that "action will be taken in the near future" to rid the county of pinball machines.

His statement came in the form of comment on a letter from County Board Chairman Daniel Dugan. Dugan earlier had released a letter he wrote to Rucker, announcing his opposition to the pinball machines.

In the letter, Dugan said he had "reached the conclusion that these machines should not be legalized," and called on the Commonwealth's Attorney to "formalize" his declared opinion that the pinball machines are against Virginia law. This would allow removal of the machines "by legal action if necessary," Dugan said.

Rucker claimed last January that the machines were illegal under Virginia law, which prohibits devices readily adaptable to gambling. No action has been taken against the machines, however. He said yesterday that he was "pleased" to have Dugan's support in the matter.

About 15 to 20 pinball machines, all without payoff or free-play devices, have been installed in Arlington since January of this year by the Hirsh Coin Machine Co., according to its president, Hirsh de la Viez. He claims they do not violate the State law.

3 D. C. Area Men Are Sentenced As Car Thieves

Federal Judge A. D. Barksdale sentenced Charles E. Sesler, 27, of Hillside, Md., to two years in the Federal reformatory at Petersburg, Va. According to FBI information, Sesler admitted participating in the thieft of 13 cars, mostly 1940 and 1941 models.

George Shanabrook, 22, a truck driver of 521 8th st. sw., drew a year and a day in the reformatory at Lewisburg, W. Va. Robert Edward Barkdoll, 21, of Capitol Heights, Md., was put on probation for three years.

Of State Dept.

Vienna, Va., Entertains Foreigners

Vienna, Va., July 4 (Spl.)—Forty-six foreign employes of the State Department, here for a six-week look at the United States, got a sample of home-made American hospitality today in this country town.

Vienna, population 2000, gladly shared its Independence Day with the visitors from all over the world and hauled out plenty of picnic fare and Fourth of July oratory along with its welcome mat.

The visitors, from such widely scattered parts as Pakistan, Argentina, France and Holland, are employed in their own countries in the State Department's Information Service offices. The inside view they got yesterday of a small American town was arranged with the help of a few Vienna residents who happen to work in the State Department, plus the town's Recreation Association, headed by Harold B. Whitmore.

After a morning tour of the Vienna Town Hall, the fire department and miscellaneous points of civic interest, conducted by Mayor Jack Nichols, the visitors bit into a lunch of salmon salad and minted melon balls prepared by the ladies of Vienna in the school cafeteria.

Following a picnic supper, they listened with townspeople to an address by Francis Pickens Miller, defeated 1948 candidate for the Virginia Democratic gubernatorial nomination. An exhibition square dance by the Vienna Dance Group, and a fireworks display, paid for by the town council and set off by the fire department, ended this international Fourth of July celebration.

Man To Hospital

Broken Park Sleep Leads To Shooting

A man who was sleeping in a Southeast park Monday night to beat the heat yesterday was charged with shooting another who, the assailant insisted, had bothered him.

Police reported the victim, Keith L. Pearson, 24, of 836 59th ave., Hillside, Md., was shot about 11 p. m. Monday by Jesse B. Bailey, 47, of 614 E st. se. following an argument. The shooting occurred near Marion Park, opposite the Fifth Precinct police station.

Municipal Court Judge Walter J. Casey continued Bailey's case yesterday until August 3 pending the outcome of Pearson's injuries. Bailey was released on $2000 bond on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Bailey said he had been sleeping in the park with his wife and two children to escape the heat.

About 10 p.m., he said, he was bothered by occupants of a car which he asserted, circled the park several times. He explained he and his family started walking to their house when he noticed a man, later identified as Pearson, following them.

"He (Pearson) made some kind of a remark to me, and he looked like he was coming at me", Bailey said. "I pulled out my gun and shot him".

Bailey said he sent his wife, Minnie, to the Fifth Precinct to report the incident immediately after the shooting. Police arrested him at his home.

Bailey said he shot the victim with a .32 Colt revolver, explaining that he always carried the gun with him when he slept in the park.

He said he and his family often sleep in the park during hot weather.

Bailey is a carpenter at the Navy Yard.

Postponement Sought for Fund Plan

About 200 civic leaders have been invited to attend a 10 a. m. meeting Thursday in the District Building to approve an Interim Committee recommendation to postpone a "one-package" fund-raising campaign at least for this year.

The Interim Committee, headed by Frank J. Luchs, voted last week to abandon the proposed 1950 all-purpose drive because of "lack of time" to secure approval of the major independent and national charity campaigns.

The Thursday meeting is also aimed to "mobilize the widest possible citizen support" to starting the regular Community Chest Federation's Red Feather campaign this fall.

Other business up for discussion will be authorization for the Interim Committee to continue exploration of means to achieve some form of concurrent campaign for approved health and welfare appeals.

Asking citizen leaders to attend the meeting, Luchs commented: "In view of the intense community-wide interest aroused in the multiple campaign problem since it was referred to the District Commissioners three months ago, we must do our best to provide a statesmanlike answer."

Biosophical Institute Announces Program

The Biosophical Institute yesterday announced its July program of four meetings, all to be held in room 11 at the Willard Hotel starting at 8 p. m.

The dates and subject of the admission-free meetings are: Tonight—the life of the composer Brahms, with recordings; July 12—"The Way to Self-Esteem;" July 19—"A Pilot's Perspective," and July 26—"The Devil's Disciple" (excerpts from the play by George Bernard Shaw.)

July 4th Events Attract Crowds In District Area

Day-Long Programs Set Up At Twelve Recreation Spots

Washington area stay-at-homes yesterday had their choice of anything from baby shows and foot races to fireworks displays as groups all over the city celebrated Independence Day.

For example, the District Recreation Department set up day-long programs at 12 different recreation centers. Nearly all programs included field events, novelty contests and softball games.

At the Rock Creek Recreation Center, off East-West hwy., Silver Spring and Bethesda service and business groups sponsored a day of baseball, field events, band music and fireworks at night. Events were staged for residents of lower Montgomery County.

A marathon race and other field events were staged at the Coolidge Recreation Center, 5th and Tuckerman sts. nw.

In a more sober mood, a Mount Rainier cerebral palsy victim placed a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at 11 a. m. on behalf of more 16,000 handicapped workers of 100 Goodwill Industries throughout the country.

He was Joseph E. Henning, 25, of 3814 Eastern ave. At the ceremony, Percy J. Trevethan, national executive secretary of Goodwill Industries of America, read a "Declaration of Independence" for the physically handicapped.

In nearby Maryland, the Capital View Park Citizens Association sponsored a community-wide celebration featuring picnic lunches, music, games, and a magic show.

Hyattsville Show Attracts 25,000

More than 25,000 people overflowed Magruder Park in Hyattsville for the patriotic exercises and fireworks display last night. The event concluded the day-long Prince Georges County Independence Day celebration.

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., principal speaker, took note of the darkening clouds and cut his speech short.

Earlier in the day, a mammoth parade through Mount Rainier, West Hyattsville, Riverdale and Hyattsville was seen by another estimated 20,0000 persons.

In addition to Governor Lane, Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) and numerous county and municipal officials were seated on the speakers' stand at list night's event.

Takoma Park Ends 60th Anniversary Fete

A mile-long parade, watched by thousands of residents, started things off yesterday, under guidance of Parade Marshal Maj. Gen. Paul H. Streit, commanding general of Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

Principal speaker at exercises held later, at Laurel and Carroll aves., was former United States Representative from Illinois, Calvin D. Johnson.

In the evening, the four-day program ended with a pageant and variety show in the District Recreation Center at 3d st., between Underwood and Sheridan sts., Takoma Park, nw. Fireworks followed and a street dance was scheduled at Laurel and Carroll aves.

Prizes were awarded last night for floats in the morning parade to the following noncommercial winners: 1. Washington Missionary College. 2. The Takoma Park Police Force. 3. The Lincoln Valley Citizens Association.

Many Relax In Holiday Mood Here

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

Most Washingtonians without a place in the country stuck close to the back yard yesterday, leaving the rest of the city to outlanders and 91 degrees of sticky heat.

A good crowd of 45,000 turned out at the zoo for another look at Smokey, the newly acquired three-month-old bear cub that was singed and orphaned by a New Mexico forest fire.

Others stretched out on Hains Point to catch the breeze off the Potomac River. Still more picnicked under the trees in Rock Creek Park.

But to most, apparently, it seemed a good day to park in a hammock or in front of a fan and move about as little as possible.

Downtown streets were empty and traffic on highways in nearby areas was reported light all day.

By midevening State Police in nearby Maryland and Virginia said traffic was running at a normal Sunday night level on highways leading to and from the District. But Union Station officials indicated that a lot of folk who left Friday by train either came back Sunday or haven't come back at all. Ten sections were added to outgoing trains Friday, they said, but only three were scheduled for the return trip last night.

At 3 p. m. parking spaces were available directly in front of Smithsonian Institution. At Washington Monument—where American flags replaced the blue Sesquicentennial banners for the Fourth—the number of visitors was reported as less than the holiday average. At 5 p. m., with four hours to go, guards at Lincoln Memorial had recorded about 10,000 visitors as against 36,0000 for the entire day last year.

The daytime crowd at Glen Echo Park was reported to be smaller than Monday's and far short of the 15,000 that rode the roller coaster and merry-go-round Sunday. Some 4000 persons kept Glen Echo's swimming pool near capacity all day, but most other public pools reported no more than "fair" business.

Most business houses and Government buildings were closed tight. The Pentagon, with Korea to worry about, was a notable exception. Guards there said the several hundred cars which filled part of one huge parking lot were many more than usual for a holiday.

The temperature got up to 91 degrees at 4 p. m., making it the hottest day since last Tuesday when it hit 95.

Sesqui Show Lead Goes to N. Y. Actor

Charles S. McClelland, a 200-pound, 6-foot, 3-inch tall Broadway astor, will play the lead role of George Washington in the forthcoming "Faith of Our Fathers" Sesqui drama.

The New Yorker, selected for his "massive size in the Washington tradition," is a former college football star and a bareback rider in Western films.

In announcing the top casting, Prof. L. Poe Leggette, drama production executive, said McClelland will be here for the first scheduled rehearsal of the cast of 150 at 1 p. m. today in Lisner Auditorium.

Leggette also made public the names of 127 actors, singers and dancers who have won roles in the Paul Green historical drama. Most of the participants are students of Washington area colleges and universities. Minor part salaries will range from $35 to $65 a week.

Playing the role of the first President will be nothing new for McClelland. In New York he has portrayed G. W. in gambols of the Lambs' Club, New York's theatrical fraternity.

The Sesquicentennial George Washington has been seen in the Capital in "Storm Song" and in "Dark Hammock."

He also played Lov Dinsey in the original "Tobacco Road" for four years and was the cowboy star in "Boy Meets Girl."

The 48-year-old actor went to Broadway in 1927 while a student at Carnegie Institute of Technology dramatic school in Pittsburgh.

McClelland and two other Broadway actors participated in tryouts at the Sylvan Theater on June 16.

The drama is scheduled to open in the new Rock Creek Park amphitheater on August 4 before an invitation-only audience. It will open to the public the following night.

Tickets will go on sale Saturday at a trailer ticket office at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

On Monday, July 11, tickets also may be purchased at the amphitheater, near 16th st. and Colorado ave. nw.

GWU Dean Addresses Oldest Inhabitants

The United States today, as in 1776, stands in the "glaring and critical light of world history," Dean Elmer Louis Kayser of George Washington University told the Association of Oldest Inhabitants yesterday.

The position taken by President Truman in defending South Korea was the same as that assumed by the patriots in writing the Declaration of Independence, Kayser told a meeting in the Old Union Engine House, 19th and H sts. nw.

The President's stand, he said, was formulated from three phrases of the Declaration, which combined, would read:

"Although we hold these truths to be self-evident, led by a decent respect for the opinions of mankind, we submit the facts to a candid world."

Soterios Nicholas read the Declaration of Independence at the meeting which is held annually by the Oldest Inhabitants. Dr. John Clagett Proctor, president, read an original poem. The meeting closed with the ringing of the old fire bell, and singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

...if you could do your shopping at home in an easy chair

...if you could visit out-of-town friends whenever you wanted

...if you could run all kinds of errands without leaving the house

...if you could keep up with church, club and civic affairs—and still have some time at home

...if you could talk with the folks who mean the most to you, wherever they are

Matter of fact, you can do these things—and a lot more—with your telephone. For a matter of pennies per call. Actually, the telephone takes a much smaller percentage of the average family budget than before the war. It's a big bargain—worth many times its cost.

Few things give you so much for so little

HARDLY a summer resort is without visitors from Washington these days. These honeymooners, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn W. Ferguson, pause beside the beautiful bay at Somerset, Bermuda. Filipinos Celebrate Fourth '4th'

By Elizabeth Maguire

WASHINGTON celebrated the Fourth with traditional fireworks and picnics, and there was plenty of sunshine. It was like many other Fourths, except that it was a bit more spirited. Each firecracker had a little salute in it to the men far away, who made the Fourth glorious.

It was the 174th Fourth for the United States, but for the Filipinos who declared their independence on July 4, 1946, it was only the fourth "Fourth." They celebrated the occasion quietly at a reception held by the Ambassador, Joaquin Elizalde, for members of the Philippine colony between 5:30 and 7:30 o'clock.

In the receiving line with the ambassador was the wife of a great soldier, Mrs. Carlos P. Romulo. General Romulo, who is now in Manila, is president of the General Assembly of U. N. and newly appointed Secretary of Foreign Affairs in the Philippines.

Others assisting through the receiving hours were Senator Vicente Madrigal of Manila; Mrs. Angela Ramos, wife of the Philippine Minister to the Argentine, and the Philippine Minister to Washington, Emilio Abello, and Mrs. Abello.

British Embassy Staff Celebrates

AT the British Embassy, staff members and their wives gathered at 2, and drove in cars to Bellapais, beautiful estate of former British Commercial Counselor and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, near Collingwood on the Potomac.

The place was loaned to staff members who were not out of town and who wanted to bring their picnic suppers and eat under the trees. A committee organized games such as egg and spoon races and tugs-of-war. Soft drinks were peddled and later there was dancing and canasta in the recreation room.

Picnic Supper Also Farewell

MR. AND MRS. HENRY PARSON ERWIN entertained at a picnic supper at Arbremont, inviting their friends to come in the late afternoon and bring bathing suits. Their married children, Mr. and Mrs. John Alvin Groghan and Mr. and Mrs. Macdonald Goodwin, were among the guests.

The party was a farewell, as Mr. and Mrs. Erwin are leaving shortly for their home at Mackinac Island, Mich. During the summer Mr. and Mrs. Croghan and Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin will be with them at various intervals. Their son, Henry Parsons Erwin, jr., is off on a western trip connected with geological studies in preparation for his sophomore year at Princeton.

Joint Party Has Double Purpose

COL. AND MRS. CARROLL CONE and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Shears entertained together yesterday at a picnic supper given on the lawn of the Cone residence. Guests, numbering nearly 100, included the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, Associate Justice and Mrs. Thomas C. Clark, and Gen. and Mrs. Wade Hampton Haislip.

Grilled hamourgers were served with salads, deviled eggs and watermelon. Lanterns were strung across the lawn, and an accordion player furnished music. A double purpose to the party was revealed in two angel food cakes, iced in white and topped with red white and blue candles. Both hosts took a bow as it was their joint birthday anniversary.

Mrs. Randall Hagner, with a group of friends, attended the buffet supper on the terrace of the Chevy Chase Club and afterward viewed the fireworks display over the golf course.

Museum Career Explodes a Myth

By Sonia Stein

WHEN Eleanor Bryant Swenson got her first big job in an art museum, a colleague took her aside and said: "Now that you are assuming the mantle of museum work, always remember that the original meaning of the word curator was the keeper of the lunatic asylum."

Miss Swenson, now curator of American art at the Corcoran Gallery of Art, has never checked the origin of the word to be sure he's right, because she's so sure he's right in spirit that the fact doesn't matter.

To the uninitiated, museum work looks calm, quiet to the point of silence and humorless to the point of deadliness. But to Nornie—who is in her late twenties, probably the youngest woman curator in any major museum in the country—the work is none of these.

By William Klemm—The Washington Post

MISS ELEANOR BRYANT SWENSON takes the measure of one of the two little zinc boys from Paducah, Ky., who will be included in the Sesquicentennial art exhibit at the Corcoran Gallery of Art beginning July 9. The boys are dressed in Civil War uniforms, one blue and one gray. Arranging the exhibit is part of her unusual job

Not after the April Fool's Day she found a medieval suit of armor stalking toward her, halberd in hand, while sepulchral tones called her name. It was the assistant director of the museum enjoying a museum-type joke.

And gallery life is not always quiet. "It certainly wasn't the day I began yowling like a fishwife at the workmen who were about to bang a new picture into some low tree branches in back of the gallery as they unloaded it," she says.

One of Nornie's jobs is to check every piece of art that comes into the gallery, for damage in transit, a job which sometimes finds her bent head-first into a crate looking for minute paint or marble chips. Damage, new or old, is noted. If the Venus deMilo came in, she'd be checked as having "old break, two arms missing."

Everything is photographed, numbered, "restored" if damaged, cleaned if dirty, annotated and hung. "People think pictures walk in the front door and hang themselves while we sit in a padded office gazing at a sixteenth century oil on a velvet draped easel," the curator laughed as she pushed a blond curl off her moist forehead.

Quite the opposite of calm is the curator's job when she turns private eye for art's sake. From clews as infinitesimal as the fleck of ashes in a Sherlock Holmes yarn, art curators trace cold trails that may turn up a missing painting or identify the painter of a mystery picture.

Found Treasure Way Out West

NORNIE'S most recent detective adventures were in the West, where she went to find art for the Sesquicentennial exhibit which opens July 9. While other staff members combed Europe and the East Coast, Nornie combed the West. Unhoped for treasures include a panorama of the Indian Massacre of 1862 which she got from the Minnesota Historical Society.

A series of translucent pictures on a canvass 222 feet long, it is a kind of nineteenth century movie in which scenes of the massacre are unrolled one by one. This historical society warned her that the "Sioux Indians have protested that it shows them in an unfavorable light," but Nornie figured she'd "risk the protest of the Sioux in Washington."

Nornie has created some furore in art circles in her three years here. Her "De Gustibus" exhibition has been called "the best loan exhibition ever held in Washington." The idea came to her in the bathtub, where she was soaking away the frustrations of a day spent being civil to gallery visitors who consider modern art "the product of a warped mind."

"If they could just realize that pictures they like today were once considered half baked concoctions by their ancestors," she thought. And up came the idea for an exhibit of art of the last century, complete with the art criticism of the era. The title "De Gustibus" is an abbreviated form of the Latin proverb which avers that "There's no disputing tastes."

Art Should Reflect Contemporary Life

ABOVE all, Nornie doesn't believe in art being a lot of esoteric "mularky." "It should have a direct relation to as many aspects of contemporary life as it can logically touch," she feels. It was Nornie who suggested that the Corcoran have an exhibit of Herblock's editorial cartoons originally published in The Washington Post.

Nornie decided at 12 she'd become a museum curator or bust. From Smith College where she specialized in Medieval Art, she went on to New York University where she studied Spanish art and the painting of the High Renaissance.

Her first big, full-time art job (at the Brooklyn Museum), suddenly involved her with American art. "I had to learn and learn fast," she remembers.

Now she is devoted to the subject, feels that people have "escaped" into medieval and renaissance art too long.

Celebrate Silver Wedding at Home

TO CELEBRATE their twenty-fifth anniversary on the fourth, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mylander entertained about 70 friends yesterday at their home in Westgate.

Mr. Mylander's associates in the Gridiron Club who lent their talents to the occasion included James T. Berryman, Walker S. Buel and Ned Brooks.

Girl's Family and Friends Attach Importance To Cultivated Speech, and to Her Dismay She Falls in Love With Fine Man Who Says 'I Seen'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in love with a man who has so many desirable qualities that at first I was inclined to overlook his errors in speech. He is a fine sensitive person, an expert in the field of mechanical construction, and he holds a responsible supervisory job.

He can quickly solve intricate mechanical and mathematical problems that baffle me. He uses many big words with exactness and poise, then suddenly says "I seen" or "I done" or "them things,"—that are jolting sounds in an otherwise perfectly good sentence.

My faults are so much worse in comparison that I hate noticing; but my family comes from a long line of writers and my friends and business associates are mostly professional people. And some of these, though careless in manners, dress and perhaps morals, wouldn't be caught dead with a dangling participle.

How Adjust Her Friends to Him?

I DON'T want to give up my old friends, but I'm afraid I'd hate any who were snobbish about this. I don't feel snobbish. I only want to correct the difficulty, and yet I feel helpless, because rather than hurt Jim's feelings I'd try to ignore his errors, in spite of the fact that my environment overstresses the importance of good speech.

We hear that background and environment play an important part in happy marriage. But all I can say to myself is,—What does any of it matter, when you find a man who is kind, intelligent, unselfish and doesn't drink, whom you love very much? I was once married to a college graduate with a beautiful vocabulary and an insatiable appetite for whisky, so I have some basis for comparison.

Is there a tactful way of solving this problem without injury to love? Please answer soon, and if necessary, lecture me. I won't mind a dressing down, if it puts a stop to my negative jitters. E. G.

She Has Chronic Problem of Fear

DEAR E. G.: It seems to me that basically your problem is fear. You are afraid of being subjected to disparaging, derisive or shocked reactions from family and friends, if they realize you are in love with a man who says "I seen" or "I done" or "them things."

Also you are afraid to let Jim know that his classic errors in speech make you fearful that you and he, as a pair, might not be socially acceptable to your favorite people. And why are you afraid to be open with him about this? Because you are afraid of antagonizing him; which is to say, afraid of losing out with him. And so it goes.

You feel threatened by rejection at every turn, and this is not a new experience, not something that developed in dating Jim. It is a chronic emotional state with you. It reflects an ingrained low estimate of yourself, which doubtless accounts for your hapless love life, in which you team up with a manifestly unsuitable fellow from time to time.

Treat Anxiety at the Source

GIVEN a substantially good feeling about yourself, you would do as genuinely self-respecting girls do to promote happy marriage nowadays. That is, you would canvass the field of eligible men in your environment, then mentally encircle the one or the few who seemed first-class according to your standards of desirability, and confidently provide them opportunity to know and appreciate and desire you. But obviously this is not your policy.

I'll wager what happens is this: You responded gratefully, and noncritically at first, to any halfway presentable chap who shows fond interest in you. And by the law of averages, most adult-age fellows casting about for sentimental companionship or those already passed over by the confidently discriminating ladies, who take the initiative in getting what they want. Thus your romantic history consists in making-do, or trying to, with second best or even a poorer grade of squire—i.e., as compared to "top quality" beaux and husbands in your walk of life.

To solve your problem at the source, you must overcome your cringing estimate of yourself. Then you will instinctively make a right accommodation to Jim's astigmatic language. Either you won't think it important then. Or you will openly discuss it with him, as a thorn in the side of congeniality, thus giving him a chance to correct it, as might be readily done if he is unselfish enough to make the effort. And if he seems noncooperative, you will feel the wisdom of letting him go,—to free your attention for a quietly confident look around.

Career Gals Need to Push More, Says He

New York—Women, contrary to some observations, are less aggressive than men in seeking jobs, C. Dean Brossman, vice president of the nonprofit organization, Mutual Positions Plan Association, states. Despite many puns, some women executives find it difficult to "sell themselves," either in competition with men or other women.

And career women face increasing competition — from men—in securing executive, semi-executive and other positions, Mr. Brossman holds. The turnabout from the wartime situation when women were in great demand has come, he said. The woman who, other factors being equal, knows best how to approach an employer stands a much greater chance of landing the coveted job.

Sometimes employers give preference to a man in a job where a woman might be better qualified. In some cases Mutual has changed an employer's thinking, telling him he should engage a woman rather than a man for a particular job—particularly in a supervisory capacity over women.

Among Mr. Brossman's suggestions to career women are: (1) Many women still use too much lipstick. (2) Fewer women than men are prepared with resumes when they discuss positions with prospective employers. (3) It is very helpful to have objective of one's goal in mind and to be able to discuss it with employers. In addition a realistic knowledge of one's chief assets is an important aid to the job-seeker.

The Mutual Positions Plan Association considers itself in the nature of a "sales department" for individuals—studying all about the "product" and then inaugurating a plan to sell the "product" to employers. Its members include men as well as women.

Method: Put egg in a shallow container; beat with fork to combine yolk and white. Add cream and beat again to mix well. Make sandwiches of cheese and bread, pressing cheese down well. Cut each sandwich into two triangles, dip in egg and milk until all the liquid is absorbed. Heat a teaspoon or two of the butter in an 8-inch frying pan over low heat until it sizzles. Add sandwiches and fry until golden brown on one side. Turn, add remaining butter and brown other side. Serve immediately.

ONE of the most highly touted bands of today is coming back to its old stamping grounds, the Blue Mirror. It's Louis Armstrong "Satchmo" to his thousands of devotees. Ameen David tries several times a year to get the All-Star Concert Court back to his night club.

The group has a right to the name Concert Court, too. In Europe recently, it played sold-out concerts in arenas seating thousands. Time, Variety, Downbeat consider "Satchmo" a unique personality, give much space to trying to express his style in print and explain his popularity.

But to appreciate the old-time jazz king, you'll just have to hear him. He arrives tomorrow night. With him will be Father Hines at the piano, Jack Teagarden as the trombonist. Others of All-Star group are Cozy Cole, Barney Bigard, Arvell Shaw and Velma Middleton.

THE fiery Chilean trio, Los Chicanos, is back in the spotlight this week, this time at the Club Kavakos. They're not only colorful, but expert on Latin American folk songs and dances.

The Chicanos are a family unit that travels all over the country. The only member still in Chile is the father, who seems to feel that the place to bring home the bacon is in his own country. The mother travels with her unusual children and spends her time making them gorgeous native costumes—covered with embroidery in brilliant colors.

The two youngest members, a sister and a brother, take care of the costumes and itinerary. An older girl sings and plays the guitar, one brother holds forth on the drums and another on the piano. All three dance together while the band supplies the music.

Ralph Hawkins is the permanent band leader at the Kavakos, and is worth watching. He and his men are as good a floor show in their own right. Norty Michaels is the talent winner this week.

NEWEST GIMMICK at Normandy Farms is a play spot for the moppets who so often come along with their parents for luncheon or dinner. There's a sandbox and swings and a big spread of green lawn to keep the young'uns busy while papa and mama relax on the terrace or veranda. More gadgets to delight girls and boys will be added later.

LOTS OF PEOPLE drop into Gate Inn—in the midst of the downtown district on the Potomac—for late snacks, now that we're knee-deep in summer. Manager Ted Spiecher tries to please them with such specials as French fried shrimp, fat chicken and turkey sandwiches, Welsh rarebits and soft shell crab. And, of course, there are always plenty of fine sirloins and filet mignons in the icebox.

Here's Arthur Himself-- in The Washington Post!

What makes Arthur tick? Arthur's amazingly appealing, absorbing and agreeable, adept at all amusing activities, always an able and alert actor—and admittedly average. Why?

What makes Godfrey go? Godfrey's got glamour, gives genial grins, gathers good gags, gets giggles and guffaws, gladdens gloomy guys, gets gleefully gay—and goes great guns. But why?

Why do you take such delight in listening to his easy-going voice on WTOP? Why do you get such a kick out of looking at his ordinary-guy face on WOIC? Read all about the amazing Arthur . . .

Rolling Helps Get Rid of Fat In Easy Steps

By Ida Jean Kain

ROLLING IS a smooth way to skirt the exercise problem in warm weather. It takes little effort and brings the weight to bear on the bulges.

Rolling is particularly effective in ironing out the fat pads along the outer thigh-line. But how come these humps and hollows? Well, there is a ball-and-socket arrangement at the hips, designed to allow the legs to move in all directions—to the side, across, forward and back, and in a circle. Since we mostly move the legs backward and forward, the muscles along the outer thigh-line are not called on to do their share of work; consequently, they lose tone and lose shape.

Lie on floor, stretched to full extension, and relax luxuriously for a minute or two. Now lift feet just slightly off the floor for clearance and roll slowly across the hips and over onto the side thighline . . . "lazy bones." Then reverse the movement, rolling rhythmically to a slow beat so as to bring weight to bear heavily on the bulges.

ALMOST anyone can take that roller. It doesn't twist the back or get the spine out of line—and it requires very little room. You can roll to a smooth finish with the greatest of ease—provided you don't eat more than you roll.

BPW Parley Split on Social Security Issue

San Francisco, July 4 (AP).—The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's convention was split today by a heated argument over the wisdom of extending social security laws.

Delegates were debating the issue when yesterday afternoon's session ended. They carried the subject over into today's general session.

Miss Mary Donlon of New York City, chairman of the legislative recommendations commitee, started the fireworks by offering a revision of the BPW's long-standing plank supporting "extension of social security laws to non-covered employments." Miss Donlon proposed that the plank include both "employments and self-employments that do not now have the benefits of statutory retirement provisions."

Objectors said social security was "as bad as socialized medicine" and wanted no part of extending it in any direction.

Miss Donlon argued that it was not a question of whether there should be social security, but "whether we want to encourage people to save for old age."

Just before the question came up, the nearly 6000 delegates heard a warm argument over Federal aid to public education, an old plank in the BPW platform.

The delegates voted to continue support of jury service for women and for strengthening the U. N.

D. C. Publisher Denies Charge Made by FTC

The publisher of a number of purported weekly papers—including the Washington Gazette—has denied Federal Trade Commission charges of misrepresentation in the sale of biographical sketches for his journals.

Asking dismissal of the complaint, Maurice Blatt contended in a filed answer that the commission is without jurisdiction in the matter and that the application of the FTC Act to his publications is unconstitutional. Blatt's local offices are at 1017 12th st. nw.

The FTC complaint, among other things, charged Blatt had falsely represented his publication as a genuine "local" paper with a paid circulation of 17,000.

The complaint said Blatt published at his Philadelphia print shop an eight-page weekly paper, six pages of which have a standard content, and distributed it free in various communities.

The publication has appeared not only as a Washington publication, FTC said, but also as the Baltimore Weekly Gazette, the Essex County Weekly Gazette, the Passaic County Weekly Gazette and the Union County Weekly Gazette.

Two of the eight pages are devoted to paid biographical sketches of individuals and articles concerning business firms in the communities where the distribution is made, the complaint said. It also charged that Blatt had said the papers were not run for profit, and asserted that Blatt's "main source" of income was derived from the sale of advertising space to individuals contracting for or approving paid write-ups in the publications.

Tawes Gets Comptroller Post in Md.

Tawes

Annapolis, Md., July 4 (AP).—Governor Lane announced today he will appoint his running mate, J. Millard Tawes, as State Comptroller to succeed James J. Lacy who died Saturday.

The appointment will be effective at 9 a.m. Wednesday.

Lane's choice of a comptroller was not unexpected. Tawes, who served in the post from 1939 to 1947, had announced as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for comptroller in the September primary on the Lane ticket.

Lacy, 46, who early this year announced he would not run again, died of a heart attack at his home Saturday.

Tawes, a resident of Crisfield and a power in Eastern Shore Democratic politics, has been serving as State Banking Commissioner under appointment by Lane.

The new comptroller ran for the Democratic nomination against Lane in 1946 but was defeated after a vigorous primary battle.

Subsequently, he and the Governor were united politically and the appointment as banking commissioner followed.

After Lacy announced his intention of retiring as comptroller, Tawes figured in speculation on the Lane ticket as opposed to the group led by George P. Mahoney, who is after the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Lane and Tawes filed for the respective nominations last week. The third member of the team is Attorney General Hall Hammond, running for reelection.

Third World War Not Inevitable, Churchill Says

London, July 4 (AP).—Winston Churchill said tonight that come what may in Korea the Western world "shall not be trampled down into serfdom and ruin." He emphasized that he does not believe a third world war is inevitable.

In an Independence Day address at a dinner of the American Society in London, Britain's Conservative Party leader declared:

"It certainly seems to me that there would be a better hope of a general settlement with Soviet Russia following upon the defeat of aggression in Korea on a localized scale than would be possible after another Communist success.

"The new fact in relations with Russia is that we have been told that the Kremlin oligarchy knows how to make the atomic bomb.

"Nothing would more surely prepare the way for a third world war than that we should drift on while large quantities of these devastating weapons are accumulated."

Chrchill said he was confident that Communist imperialism, "surpassing anything dreamed of by the Czars," will be halted.

No Tire Shortage, Company Head Says

Akron, Ohio, July 4 (U.P.).—William O'Neil, president of the General Tire and Rubber Co., said today that "there is no tire shortage" and "no threat of one."

O'Neil said that, despite "false rumors" in connection with the Korean war, "all rubber manufacturers have plenty of tires to sell."

In newspaper advertisements carried from coast-to-coast, O'Neil said "There is no reason for anyone to be stampeded into buying tires through fear of rationing."

Chew Named Parole Chief In Virginia

Richmond, Va., July 4 (AP).—Governor Battle today appointed Charles P. Chew, executive secretary of the Virginia Parole Board since 1945, as director of parole.

Chew was named to succeed Col. Richard W. Copeland, who resigned June 30 as director of parole and chairman of the Parole Board. In his resignation, Copeland said he found his duties as State director of welfare and institutions necessitated his action.

The appointmen of Chew to the $7100 per year job was for Copeland's unexpired term ending September 30, 1952. While Chew was also named a member of the Parole Board, there was no immediate designation of a chairman.

Chew was born in Harrisonburg on April 3, 1913, the son of P. S. and Virginia Byrd Chew. He attended schools in Harrisonburg and in 1933 received his A. B. degree from Bridgewater College. The following 10 years were spent as a teacher—one year in Highland County and nine years in Waynesboro.

Copeland was appointed to the Parole Board on October 1, 1946, and made director and chairman on March 24, 1947. On June 28, 1948, he became acting director of the department of welfare and institutions and on December 21, 1948, was named director.

Spurned GI Wounds Girl, Ends Own Life

Columbia, S. C., July 4 (U.P.)—A 20-year-old GI, frustrated because his girl friend refused to marry him, shot her and killed himself as 20 persons looked on, police said today.

He was Pfc. Leonard Weber of Mandan, N. D. His pretty girl friend, 21-year-old Barbara Chalk, was in "fair" condition at a hospital with a bullet wound near her left ear. She told police she and Weber had been dating since February.

Archduke Franz Joseph inheriting a sweeping bow from the El Borracho doorman, whose pappy was a royal footman . . . F. Sinatra taking more spaghetti than luggage to London on the plane. Seven cases of it . . . Governor Warren of California and his three lovely dghtrs, screaming, hollering and laughing fit-to-kill on those Steeplechase rides . . . Paul Robeson, who appears to be afraid you won't know he's pro-Communist, reading The Daily Scummunist as he strolls the street . . . Marlon Brando, the actor, who says he made a "mere" $49,000 last season, applying for unemployment insurance. (On my taxes!) . . . M. Sallies in Our Alley: M. Todd's "Peep Show" is doing standee biz despite the heat. One of us wondered why he opened the Very Undressed revue in the summer instead of the fall . . . "Maybe," said a wag, "he was afraid the girls would catch cold" . . . Ken Murray, whose "Blackouts" was just as naked and ran 7 years on the coast, reminded Todd: "A girlie show without bare girls plays to bare seats."

Courtroom Contrast: Justice Flood had just sentenced Frank Erickson to 7 years plus a $30,000 fine for being a gambler . . . Five years of it was lopped off on the condition that the sinful bookie promise never to be naughty again . . . In the same court a louse, convicted of attempting rape on a little girl, was given a finger-in-the-face calldown and sentenced to 6 months.

Memos of a Midnighter: Corinne & Tito Valdez, the show-stoppers in "Peep Show," were especially singled out by the censor's bluepencil. Tito must no longer kiss Corinne's chest in the "Violins from Nowhere" number. Among a Daredevil's Stunts

Stunt Flier Tries Crashing Into Barn

By Dick Grace

CHAPTER FOUR

So I became a stunt flier for the movies.

I was free to concentrate on the deliberate demolition of airplanes.

The script for "The Forest Ranger," into which Tom Mix had written an air crash, was completed and submitted to me.

There was a change from horse to airplane. That was easy. The air shots of sideslipping down red-wood-covered cliffs, pulling out feet above the ground, were a matter of flying technique and depth perception.

But to crash into a barn and put the entire airplane inside it was a different proposition.

From my standpoint this shot was as difficult as any which could be imagined. Crashing head on into a solid wall, and stopping completely meant a slowing down from 70 miles per hour to zero in about 50 feet.

After studying the problems and conferring with the construction department, it was agreed the barn was to be erected to the following specifications:

Wide enough to permit easy entrance of the whole airplane; the front to be made of half-inch basswood, whose fibers would break clean rather than in long splinters; backed up by two-by-fours sawed halfway through at 45-degree angle. Crashing into this should slow the ship's forward motion by from 20 to 25 mph.

The rear wall must be braced to take the remainder of the force which I hoped would not be enough to cause much rebound.

To soften this blow, and yet not go beyond the second wall, some cushioning device was needed. So the large six-by-sixes used to stop the ship were sawed laterally, then braced with strap iron. When six-by-sixes broke, more miles per hour would have been absorbed. The metal strips would give with me.

Too Narrow

We went to the spot on which the barn had been erected. Everything had been done as directed: the six by sixes were sawed, the strap iron in place; the basswood front, and the five hundred foot clearing for the approach; everything—except the width of the building.

Dick Grace

Somewhere dimensions had gotten confused. Instead of the foot and a half clearance for each wingtip, which I figured was the least I could get along with, the width of the barn was only six inches more than the overall span of the ship!

No one's judgment could possibly be acute enough to fly an airplane into an enclousure with three inches on either side to spare. From my position in the rear cockpit with the wing above me I couldn't see where airplane left off and barn began.

Tom Mix saw it, believed it was impossible. The set would have to be torn down, he said, and a new one built.

But that would cause a lot of added expense. The prime consideration was what the home office would say. The future of all crashes was in jeopardy.

The solution was simple. All I needed to shoot at was a bull's-eye. The extremities of my wings, the narrow margin between them and the sides of the building, could be forgotten.

The two windows and the door were quickly removed and replaced with siding. One large window was cut exactly in the center of the structure. This was set in high for I'd stall into it. As it was a standard window, divided into four panes, all I had to do was to hit the center of the cross formed by the frame.

I got into the ship, taxied to the take-off point, adjusted my belts. A push on the throttle, speed, the wheels left the ground.

The next moments would prove whether my calculations were right or not. That peculiar feeling in the pit of my stomach should all not end right! A feeling I've had during every crackup.

The ship had to hit hard enough to break through. If it did not, the set would be destroyed. All the plane must be inside. If I hit too hard the rear wall would collapse. Equally ineffective for the movie shot.

Bull's Eye Crash

How I wanted to look at the wingtips as we approached the barn—to size up the situation before I pulled into the stall! Instead, my eyes remained focussed on the crossbars of the window. And did it loom up suddenly. From an inconspicuous object in the distance it was projected directly in front of the propeller.

The throttle was back, my hand on the switch. The stall. Then the leading edges knifed into the thin basswood. The switch was cut, the stick forward to keep it out of my belly. The ship was in the barn. A second crash almost simultaneous with the first. I had hit the rear, second wall. The posts gave but the iron held. The mounts broke and the motor was pushed back on the gas tank.

Confined to the narrow limits of the barn, the sound was explosive. I was surrounded, submerged in wreckage. Flying pieces hit around me. Something passed between the leather under my armpit and my hand on the switch with sufficient force to make me notice it above the noise and scattering debris.

I got out, looked at the wings. They had barely cleared the walls. Ben Eastman, in charge of the rescue crew, motioned for me to come to the cockpit. I looked in. A jagged propelled splinter half a foot long long had almost completely passed through a sheet of one-eighth inch steel plate at the rear of the cockpit.

I felt the hole which it had made in the left armpit of my leather coat. Three inches to the right, a little down, and it would have had my heart.

But the stunt was perfect—better than I had anticipated. The amazing thing to all of them was how anyone could have judged so accurately.

It was so simple. Any leeway, other than I had, would have been superfluous. The word went around. I could put an airplane anywhere, anytime, at any speed, and make it end in any position.

That, I fear, was a bad beginning. It made work to follow difficult. Absolutely impossible problems were tossed into my lap. On one or two occasions I was foolish enough to try them.

Leopoldists Win Confidence Vote In Belgian Senate

Brussels, Belgium (Wednesday), July 5 (U.P.).—The Belgium Senate gave a vote of confidence early today to the new all-Catholic government pledged to return King Leopold to the throne. The vote was 90 to 83.

A similar vote was provided last week by the lower house. The only remaining obstacle to Leopold's return to the throne from his exile was a joint session of Parliament to repeal a 1945 law barring him from reigning.

Catholic sources said the pro-Leopold Social Christian Party was determined to speed repeal of the law before Friday night, so Leopold could return Saturday.

George Sees Possible Excise-Tax Cut Changes

Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) yesterday said the Senate Finance Committee may make some "readjustments" in the excise-tax cuts voted by the House, but will try to stay within the same dollar limits.

His committee opens hearings today on the House-passed bill to cut Federal sales taxes by about $1,010,000 000 a year, and offset the loss in revenue by closing loopholes and raising corporation tax rates.

Lake Michigan Crash Kills 3 Navy Fliers

Chicago, July 4 (AP).—A Navy torpedo bomber crashed into Lake Michigan today, killing three men aboard.

The plane was on a return trip from the naval station at suburban Glenvew, Ill., to a station in Virginia, by way of Detroit. Names of two enlisted men and an officer aboard were withheld.

NBC's Likely to Run Out of Millionaires

By John Crosby

THERE ARE a number of grave flaws in "Live Like a Millionaire," a new NBC giveaway show (WRC, 2:30 p.m. EDT, Monday through Friday), the gravest one being a matter of principal. A million dollars just isn't as much principal as it once was. The main prize in this sweepstake is a week's interest on one million dollars. A man could hardly keep body and soul together for a week in New York on such a niggardly sum, which is what the winner is required to do.

Let's say NBC has it invested at 4 percent per annum. That would be—now, don't rush me—40,000 fish. After taxes, maybe, $25,000. Divide by 52 and you get a measly $480.

Well, the first winner, a nigh club singer named Johnnie Doyle, had to bring his wife and family from California to New York, live for a week at the Waldorf-Astoria and eat in places like 21.

Why, bless my soul, Mr. Doyle couldn't buy round-trip tickets on a cattle car for his family of four, to say nothing of paying his hotel bills, with $480. Recognizing this fact, the producers of this show gallantly pick up the tabs at the hotel and restaurants, pay the cabbies and tip the cigarette girls. A millionaire couldn't afford to spree around New York for a week on his own money, not these days.

Not Enough Millionaires

IN AN endeavor to take some of the curse off this business of subsisting on the interest from one million dollars, Mr. Doyle and his wife were dispatched to New Jersey to spend a day with a real millionaire, J. J. Maschuch. Mr. Maschuch took them for a ride on his yacht where Mrs. Doyle immediately got violently seasick.

I don't know if all the winners are to spend a day with a millionaire, but I'd advise against it. In the first place, NBC is going to run out of millionaires. And, in the second place, all the millionaires I know are too busy trying to get on the program so they, too, can afford a week in New York.

Anyhow, Mr. Doyle and family are now safely back in California, living decently again in their trailer. Mr. Doyle is singing in a night club and probably earning a good deal more than $480 a week. Meanwhile, "Live Like, etc." is combing the hills for more suckers to come to New York and endure the hardships of living like millionaires.

If that sort of thing interests you—this is a lark—one of your children will have to lug you or your wife on to the program, and one of you will have to display some talent. Not much talent, but you've got to be able to do something. Sing. Or play the marimba. Or do imitations.

I'D RATE most of the talent as fair to middling semipros, though once in a while a real pro wanders in. Semipro marimba players ought not to be allowed out of the house, if you ask me. The idea of coupling a giveaway show with a talent show was bound to occur to someone sooner or later, so stop complaining.

I'm working on a program in which the winners will be exclusively millionaires, the chief prize will be a week's tax exemption, and every millionaire will spend a day visiting the Doyles in their trailer.

You Could Call This A 'Sign of Our Times'

Clara Sternecker is back from a visit to Omaha. She reports that a men's clothing store owned by a fellow named Pray displays the sign:

NO CARTOON TODAY

Cartoonist Coakley wasn't very much impressed with today's column.

"There aren't any good cartoon ideas in it," he said. "You're losing your touch, kid."

"Oh, I don't know," I protested. "I think if you really put your mind to it you could whip up an interesting drawing based on one of these items."

"Nope," said Cook with finality. "There isn't a good cartoon idea in the whole column. This is one day the customers will have to get along without an illustration."

And when that Coakley says something, he means it.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three-month-old tiger kitten with squealing voice." (Temple 2130.)

"Assorted cats and kittens; all clean and healthy." (Adams 6448.)

"Housebroken, intelligent fox terrier, 1 year old." (Johnson 2-1456.)

THIS IS WASHINGTON

One can cope with the heat—especially in this day of air-conditioning. But not with tourists.

Don't get me wrong. I love my relatives. And I have as much Chamber of Commerce spirit as the next fellow. I think it's wonderful that all these people come to Washington each year and leave so many of their dollars behind with our local businessmen.

But I am getting just a trifle weary of seeing Washington from the top of the Monument, walking my feet down to the ankles at Mount Vernon, and explaining about the numbered streets and the lettered streets and the diagonal avenues.

The Lincoln Memorial I can take; even a dozen times a year. It does something to me.

But the rest of the routine of showing visitors around town has worn pretty thin. Especially the business of taking them up to the Hill, and letting them sit through 15 minutes of a session on either side of the Capitol.

If one more relative whispers "Where are the rest of the Congressmen?" or "Why isn't anybody paying any attention to the man who is speaking?" I think I will blow a gasket.

Either that, or get myself a white hat and a guide's license and go at the thing in dead earnest.

In all fairness, I should mention that my father is the exception to the rule.

He settles down in his usual room at the Hay-Adams and says: "Son, I've seen the sights and what I need a lot more than a rubbernech tour at this point is some sleep. Call me in time for dinner."

He's my kind of guy.

WHICH WAR?

Gretchen Hood of 1226 Fairmont st. nw. reports that some opportunist has put up a sign reading:

"Come In and Try Our Beer. Guaranteed Prewar."

SEEMS LOGICAL

Mrs. J. D. Redding of 827 Rose lane, Falls Church, Va., reports that on Arlington's N. Garfield st., between 9th and 10th, she encountered a puddle about 1 foot in diameter.

Beside it stood an official-looking sign reading: "No Swimming or Fishing."

KID STUFF

Temple Dunn of 5 Rock Creek Church rd. nw. went over to the Berliner Animal Hospital to get his dog, Whitie, the other day.

For company, he took along 3-year-old Anne Marie Austin, who displayed a lively interest in Whitie's condition and whereabouts.

That satisfied Anne Marie's curiosity, and she watched with great interest as Dunn reclaimed his pooch from the medics.

But they were no sooner outside again, than she let loose with an accusing:

Japan Viewed as Real Red Goal

By Drew Pearson

The main thing you have to remember about the Korean imbroglio is that this is a major lunge by Joe Stalin for what he wants most—the teeming, energetic, and at the moment partially Americanized islands lying off the Siberian coast, Japan.

Pearson

History has shown that there is no basic difference between the Czarist planners in the Kremlin and the Communist plotters in the Kremlin. They all reached for the same objectives.

The Czar, struggling for outlets to the sea, conquered Finland, Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia in order to nail down his domination of the Baltic Sea.

He started the Crimean War with Turkey and Britain in order to get a warm-water outlet through the Dardanelles.

He yearned for the country now called Iran and an outlet on the Indian Ocean through the Gulf of Persia; though British politics and the long, overland route across the deserts made this not worth recourse to arms.

And in the Far East he fought Japan in order to secure Korea and the Liaotung Peninsula jutting down into the warm waters of the China Sea.

That war ended in defeat. Teddy Roosevelt, long-time friend of the Japanese, intervened just as Japan was nearing the exhaustion point; and the Czar signed the Treaty of Portsmouth under which Korea, control of Manchuria and one half the Island of Sakhalin went to Japan. The Czar was left sulking behind his unsatisfactory icebound port at Vladivostok.

This columnist, as a young newspaperman, traveled through much of this crucial area—up through Sakhalin, across to the Siberian mainland, up the Amur River to Khabarovsk, through Manchuria to Harbin, and across the trans-Siberian railroad to Vladivostok.

I was jailed briefly by the Bolsheviks in Khaborovsk, lived on the beach at Vladivostok, came back three years later through Korea to South Manchuria, and took the long trek across the Gobi Desert to the heart of Mongolia—Urga.

On this last visit—in 1925—the Russians were making their first attempt to dominate China, and I saw long caravans loaded with Soviet rifles crossing the Gobi. At that time, however, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek—now the darling of the Republicans—was an ally of Russia and his troops were trained by the famed Soviet military man, Comrade Borodin.

From this and other observations, I am convinced that Stalin's major objective, much like the Czar's, is this great industrial heart of North Asia—the iron, steel and coal regions of Manchuria, Korea and Japan.

He has already made one stab at the iron and coal of Germany and, thanks to the Berlin airlift, has failed. Now the Schuman Plan for European iron-steel cooperation may thwart him further.

Already he has taken back Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania and semi-control over Finland along the Baltic. And he has started the greatest exodus of Baltic peoples in recent history in order to protect the military secrets of the "Baltic Lake"—which was why a U. S. Naval plane was shot down there.

He has also been thwarted by Tito in his attempt to extend Slavic domination to the Adriatic through the "Land of the Southern Slavs"—though an invasion of Yugoslavia may be next on the schedule. He may come back to the easy pickings of oil-rich, defenseless Iran.

But, basically, Joe Stalin, like the czar, yearns to dominate North Asia—later Southeast Asia. And the chief roadblock in his path is Japan.

That is why President Truman's Joe Stalin is not likely to take this decision to use the armed forces American blocking move lying of the United States in Korea is down.

And that is why
